WHAT A POWERFUL DIFFERENCE THIS HIGH-OCTANE GASOLINE MAKES!

Like a man from Missouri he had to be shown. Now he knows the powerful difference high-octane "Ethyl" gasoline can make in a car's performance. That's because only a high-octane gasoline can meet the demands of today's modern engines. It burns smoothly—evenly—powerfully—under the high-compression pressures of these engines.

In fact, a high-octane rating is just about the most important single quality you want in a fuel. So always make sure you get a high-octane gasoline. Next time you buy gasoline, look for the "Ethyl" emblem on the pump. You'll enjoy the powerful difference it makes!

Van Heusen Century Shirts Won't wrinkle ever!

Small wonder the Van Heusen Century shirt is becoming the most popular shirt in the world.

It's the world's only shirt with a patented, soft, one-piece collar that won't wrinkle ever! Ordinary collars are made of three layers of fabric sewn or "glued" together. This remarkable shirt is available in colors and a variety of smart Van Heusen original collar styles.

All are easy to launder—never need starch. Just iron the collar flat, flip it, it folds perfectly because the fold-line is woven in permanently!

Certified tests prove Van Heusen Century shirts give up to 80 wearings and washings (twice as much as ordinary shirts!).

Yet the price is the same. White, $3.95... Superfine White, $4.95... Colors, $4.50. Ties shown: Van Heusen Shirt-Mates, $1.50.

THE HERITAGE CLUB

NOW, and for a period of six months, you may TRY OUT this successful cooperative plan by which you obtain a unique collection of the world's classics, especially illustrated by the world's greatest artists, planned by the world's greatest book designers and well printed on fine papersfor the same price as ordinary novels!

ment, just take a look at some of the books you have purchased during the past year. Now that you have read them, how many of them will you read again? How many of them could vanish from your home without being missed by you? How much more satisfaction will there be for you - if you can this year come into possession of books that you will want to read, and to read over and over again: of books so beautiful that you will take pride in having them in your home!

At this moment you are given the opportunity to do so, and it is an unusual opportunity too. For you are invited to accept a Trial Membership in The Heritage Club, which will cover a period of six months only. The directors of The Heritage Club have decided at this time to take in just one thousand new members; and on a trial basis.

THE MEMBERS of The Heritage Club regularly come into possession of those "classics which are our heritage from the past, in editions which will be the heritage of the future." They come into possession of books beautifully illustrated and beautifully designed, printed on papers chemically tested to assure a life of at least two centuries, then staunchly bound and boxed.

You may find this next statement hard to believe; but nevertheless it is true, and it seems a principal reason for the continuing success of this cooperative plan: the members obtain these books for the same price that they are called upon to pay for ordinary rental library books!

If you try this system, you will in the coming six months receive just six books, at a cost of only $3.95 each-or only $3.55 each if you pay for the books in advance! Then, when the members receive the Prospectus for the next annual Series, that Prospectus will go to you.

BEFORE YOU BEGIN to read this advertise- DURING your Trial Membership, you will receive The Complete Andersen: the only complete edition of Hans Christian Andersen's stories existing in the world, in any language; 165 stories put into a single enormous volume for the first time, translated by Jean Hersholt and illustrated in colors by Fritz Kredel; and Sister Carrie by Theodore Dreiser, profusely illustrated with drawings by the great American painter Reginald Marsh; and Doughty's "greatest of all travel-books," Travels in Arabia Deserta, with preface by T. E. Lawrence and on-the-spot illustrations by Edy Legrand; and The Mystery of Edwin Drood by Charles Dickens, meticulously edited by Vincent Starrett and with illustrations by Everett Shinn; and Goethe's The Story of Reynard the Fox, illustrated with engravings in wood by Fritz Eichenberg; and Swann's Way by Marcel Proust, illustrated with paintings by Bernard Lamotte.

Or, if for any reason you do not want to have one of these titles, you are permitted to make substitutions from a list of several dozen Heritage books-in-print!

This Trial Membership is offered to you now because the directors of The Heritage Club confidently believe that you will find these books rich treasures for your home. Six of them, in the opinion of the directors, will make you want to remain in the Club.

N EVER IN THE HISTORY of book publishing has a greater bargain than this been offered to wise buyers of books. The offer of a Trial Membership gives you the opportunity to put this statement to the test. Please fill out the coupon printed herewith and mail it to The Heritage Club promptly. You will then receive a handsome Prospectus which fully describes The Heritage Club's system and the books you will receive in the Trial Membership; and a Trial Membership will be reserved for you.

PICK'S ORDEAL

Sirs:

"Vernon Pick's $10 Million Ordeal" (Life, Nov. 1) will probably be the year's outstanding article in the mining field. It actually takes the reader through the trials and tribulations of the real prospector.

Though a tenderfoot to begin with, Pick was a miner's man, an exception to the rule. He had the common sense to figure that his golden opportunity lay beyond the areas where man could prospect from an automobile or horse, and he had the guts to go with his reasoning.

D. C. MILLER

National Prospector's Gazette Bellflower, Calif.

Sirs:

To me, Pick typifies America: he's the minuteman, the frontier scout, the forty-niner—he's the man who has made this country great.

IRENE WEMPE

Los Angeles, Calif.

Sirs:

I know the man well enough to imagine with what godlike indifference he will wear his crown of fortune. The day Pick headed West in his panel truck we kidded each other about uranium. His nose was in the wind, sniffing for the stuff. But what he really had in mind was to do some photography essays and free-lance writing. When he kiddingly suggested I join him and we hunt uranium I could hardly resist. But I was practical. I played safe and stayed home.

Could you kindly tell me how much tax the government will take of the $10 million?

FIRST NEW 1955 CARS

Sirs:

I do not understand why Chevrolet passed up an obvious advertising "gimmick" while introducing their new V-8 ("First Entirely New 1955 Cars," LIFE, Nov. 1). They built a V-8 in the years 1917, 1918 and 1919. Fortunately I own an original copy of the brochure entitled "A New and Greater Chevrolet" which introduced the 1917 Chevrolet V-8 to the world. I discovered the above mint-condition copy in the glove compartment (in the door) of my 1917 "470" Chevrolet touring car.

"Im sure glad I belong to BUE CROSS!"

Says Ray A. Jackson, Woodshop Instructor, Concord, California

"Sunday the ambulance came and rushed me 20 miles to the hospital. I barely knew what was happening. Me with never a serious illness in my life! In fact I'd thought this was only flu. When we arrived, my wife needed only to show my Blue Cross card at the hospital desk."

"Things went from bad to worse. 7 hours in the operating room took care of the main difficulty with my stomach. But then jaundice set in, with complications that called for more surgery. Shock followed that, and I spent 12 days in an oxygen tent. Nobody thought I'd make the grade."

"The 53rd day I left for home, wobbly and 45 pounds lighter. Considering all the care I got, the hospital charges were a bargain—but tremendous nevertheless! Blue Cross certainly took over a heavy burden for me. The job Blue Cross does in a community can't be emphasized enough!"

Chances are 1 in 3 your family will have a hospital bill within the year! So join now with friends and neighbors who have banded together to protect themselves for pennies a day against hospital expenses...through membership in nonprofit Blue Cross.

To get well faster after a hospital stay, a person should be free of worry, not plagued with the thought of debts. Joining Blue Cross can provide the security you need. Today, 46 million Americans have this effective protection.

The hospital care you need! The primary aim of Blue Cross is to help you get required hospital care, rather than dollars. That means all the basic hospital services, plus many of the costly extras. On entering the hospital, you need only show your Blue Cross card. Details are handled directly with the hospital by Blue Cross. You don't even need to file a claim.

It costs you only a few cents a day to provide Blue Cross protection for your whole family, even though benefits might add up to thousands of dollars. The Blue Cross Plan in your community is sponsored by local citizens and the hospitals working together.

So both the costs and benefits are adjusted to fit local needs and conditions.

Blue Cross is strictly nonprofit. That is why it can provide such wide, realistic protection at such low cost. Every cent paid in, except for small administrative expenses, is set aside to pay for hospital care.

When you change jobs or retire, you may still keep your Blue Cross protection. It's easily arranged through your local Blue Cross Plan. Of course, frequent use of Blue Cross benefits will never cause you as an individual to be dropped.

The protection families need most—that's what Blue Cross provides. Last year alone, Blue Cross paid for $665,000,000 in actual hospital services. Here is today's best-proved safeguard against the burden of unpredictable hospital expenses.

How to join. Ask your employer about it. Or get in touch with the local office listed in your phone book under Blue Cross. Rural families in many states can join through farm organizations. You may also get details by writing Blue Cross Commission, Dept. 115, 425 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 11, Illinois.

To help you meet doctor expenses there's BLUE SHIELD

In some general hospitals, 7 out of 10 patients require surgery. Generous amounts are paid by Blue Shield on hundreds of surgical services, and for medical and maternity care. Sponsored by doctors and other citizens, Blue Shield is nonprofit, low in cost.

FEWER COLDS... FEWER SORE THROATS FOR LISTERINE ANTISEPTIC USERS!

Yes, research conducted over a 12-year period revealed that regular twice-a-day users of Listerine Antiseptic had fewer and generally milder colds, and fewer sore throats, than non-users.

And personal experience impressively adds this:

Kills Germs on Throat Surfaces

Listerine Antiseptic, used at the first symptom of trouble, can often help head off a cold or sore throat due to a cold or lessen its severity.

That is because Listerine Antiseptic treats these infections as infections should be treated . . . with safe, germ-killing action.

Listerine reaches way back on throat surfaces to kill millions of germs, including the "secondary invaders" (see panel at right) that can contribute so much to the misery of colds.

Germs Reduced 96.7%

When you gargle Listerine, research shows germ reductions on mouth and throat surfaces ranging up to 96.7% fifteen minutes after gargling . . . and up to 80% even after one hour.

So, no matter what else you do, guard against trouble with the daily Listerine routine, and, at the first sign of a sneeze or cough, increase the frequency of the gargle.

1955 DESCOTO STYLED

The new forward look

De Soto hits a new fashion high in modern body styling. Barely five feet high, the De Soto for '55 is longer, wider, and lower than ever before. Note the forward-looking freshness in every curving line. Styled for tomorrow, the new De Soto creates a "first" in modern cars. Truly a car that will stay in style as long as you drive it.

Have you favorite colors? Choose from fifty-five combinations of vigorous reds, frosty blues, greens, an artist's range of pastels.

Look again! See that curved New Horizon wrap-around windshield with its smart new Sun Cap. It is swept back to give you 20 per cent more glass area for maximum visibility. You see as never before, without distortion . . . drive with new confidence and safety.

New elegance, new interiors

Swing open the door of this superb new car. Subtle luxury, new accents of elegance await you.

Exquisite fabrics and glamorous hues are gently contrasted with sparkling metal trims. Silky nylons, new sculptured weaves, genuine leathers, sponge-rubber-backed nylon carpets! Each color combination is harmoniously created to enhance De Soto's fresh new look.

FOR TOMORROW!

TWO MIGHTY V-8's!

The famous FIREDOME at a new low price—185 hp.

And the fabulous FIREFLITE, a brand-new 200 hp. series

The handsome '55 De Soto Sportsman hardtop in the foreground is the 200 hp. Fireflite. Proudly showing its style on the hill is the 185 hp. Firedome sedan.

Drive the new De Soto! You'll find it wondrously easy to handle ... with every control located for utmost convenience. Moved out of your way to the dash is the new Flite control shift lever. And the new pendulum-type brake pedal is suspended from above for fast, easy action. It's much wider, too—so you can brake with either foot.

A new V-8 at a lower price

Here's more welcome news! The new Firedome series comes to you at a new, lower price. At the same time, this beauty of a car packs extra horsepower . . . now 185 hp., to be exact. New this year, also, is the fabulous Fireflite . . . De Soto's 200 hp. V-8 luxury series.

De Soto leads, too, in automatic features. You can have a car that does almost everything except decide where to drive! Optional equipment includes Full-Time Power Steering, Feather-Touch Power Brakes, Four-Way-Power Front Seat, and Air Conditioning.

LIFE BIRTHDAY BOYS MILLER AND WILLIAMS AND JUDY IN HER $150 CREATION

IMPROVISATIONS ON A HAPPY BIRTHDAY THEME

Life's 18th birthday anniversary this week might easily have gone quite unnoticed if the following reminder hadn't come in from Clay Miller Jr. of Spencer, W. Va.: "Do you realize that LIFE is old enough to go to college? My son Clay III (above, left) and you were born on the same day, Nov. 23, 1936, and he just entered West Virginia University this fall. How do you feel?"

Busy. This is the biggest issue of LIFE so far this year. But while wishing Buddy Miller of Spencer many happy returns of our joint birthday we noticed an interesting improvisation on this birthday theme, involving another kind of birthday baby (above, and pp. 16-18). And still another improvisation, revolving about Life's cover story this week, turned up just as we went to press.

While Judy Holliday (see cover) was rehearing her TV spectacular (see pp. 113-118), Photographer Mark Shaw was desperately running through NBC costumes to find one suitable for a cover picture. He finally chose a red one, but Reporter Alice Thompson objected to the sleeves. "Can't we cut 'em off?" suggested Shaw. Minutes later a Holliday howl arose: "Hey, what are you doing! That's my dress!" as she rushed, too late, to save the sleeves of the dress she personally paid $150 for—and thereafter wore in the show. In part reparation for this unwonted improvisation, a Life artist drew them back in (above) for readers to compare with the cover.

Getting back to birthdays, Life starts its 19th year next week with the first of three articles by Lieut. Colonel Yuri Rastvorov, one of the most important Soviet agents to defect to the West in recent years, who gives an MVD man's intimate story of the recent tumultuous times in the U.S.S.R.

More power with less weight makes $19.50* G-E Portable ideal for all household mixing

Recently, General Electric's designers discovered a way to keep all the advantages of the portable mixer and do away with the many disadvantages women have complained about.

This was accomplished by two revolutionary General Electric innovations:

First—G-E engineers designed a motor that provides enormous power for its weight and size.

Second—G-E designers perfected a new casing—light as a feather, but strong as steel.

And the total weight of the mixer is less than 3 pounds.

Your local G-E dealer will gladly demonstrate one for you. The price? Only $19.50. General Electric Company, Small Appliance Division, Bridgeport 2, Connecticut.

GENERAL (ELECTRIC

* Manufacturer's recommended retail or Fair Trade price.

NO STRAIN TO HOLD. A rubber base guard lets you rest this mixer on the edge of the bowl. Thus the weight is supported by the bowl instead of by your hand, removing all arm strain. Speed Selector, with 3 mixing speeds, is at your fingertips—gives you the right power for each job.

SETS DOWN LIKE A HAND IRON. Mixer stands up on its special rest—so drippings fall back into the bowl, not on the work counter.

HANGS UP LIKE A SAUCEPAN. A handy keyhole slot lets you hang it up where it's always ready at hand yet never in the way. Beaters are easily released by handy beater ejector for cleaning and storage.

GOES TO THE FOOD. Instead of having to take the food to this new mixer, you can take it where the food is—use it to mix at the range while you cook.

THE MOMENT THAT ALL HUNTERS WAIT FOR COMES TO WINNIE HINMAN IN SOUTH DAKOTA'S BLACK HILLS AS A FINE BUCK BOUNDS BEFORE HIS GUNSIGHTS

BUMPER YEAR FOR GUNS AND GAME

Since the first signs of frost this fall the American male, armed with rifle or fowling piece, has been taking to the woods in numbers that would have seemed unbelievable 15 years ago. Last week, as the hunting season reached its height, an army of 15 million gunners—twice the number that hunted before World War II—were stalking fields and forests. For the moment each one was a throwback to some remote ancestor who hunted to survive, and each lived for the moment when he could catch a prize in his sights (above).

These moments have been frequent in 1954 with game as plentiful as hunters. It is a bumper year for dove and pheasant, and deer are almost numerous enough to be a nuisance. In Michigan the growing group of bow and arrow hunters alone has bagged 1,800 white-tailed deer and 30,000 more are expected to fall in the opening day fusillade of the gunning season this week. In many states a new type of hunting has become popular, called "controlled shooting," in which farmers stock their land with game and charge so much a gun per day. Everybody seemed happy except for the duck hunters waiting impatiently for a vast migration of waterfowl which was slightly behind schedule on its way south. What made the birds tardy was the weather which, complained duck hunters, was "too nice for ducks."

THE ASSAULT ON BOBWHITE AND WATERFOWL

STRICKEN DUCK begins to fall after being hit by Herbert Fleishhaker in California's San Joaquin Valley. His Labrador retriever Bandit sits quietly waiting for owner's command to fetch the bird.

DEAD GAME AND HUNTERS share a pickup truck in tree farm forest owned by the Weyerhaeuser lumber company in western Washington. Part of a party of 280, many of them loggers employed by the company, these men and their friends started out at dawn, stalked the woods all day, bagged a total of 65 deer.

CLOSING SHOP in Troy, lumber company foreman posts sign stopping work for hunting weekend.

EXCUSED TO SHOOT, Troy High School boys tarry in cafe before starting out. Their favorite way to hunt is "gassing," riding around in cars until deer is sighted, then hopping out and blazing away.

WHOLESALE STALKING IN HUNT-HAPPY WEST

In the Northwest at this time of year nothing—including work—is quite so important as hunting. The entire male population of towns like Troy, Mont., even the parson, vanishes, leaving church, sawmills and stores untended. Recognizing this, an increasing number of corporations are sponsoring hunting trips, taking their employes by large groups (opposite page) into choice hunting grounds.

With the increase in hunters comes an increase in hunters' stories. Billings, Mont. reported the case of Betty Kuchan whose hunter husband left her to mind the jeep. A bull moose came up, attacked the jeep and Mrs. Kuchan in self-defense killed him with one shot. From Tule Lake, Calif. a goose hunter reported that he got two honkers with one shot and then was fined $25 for being one over his limit.

ONLY BOY in class at Troy High, Larry Perry, who did not go hunting, is center of attention.

COOKING CLASS (below) in hunting season is utilized to teach Troy High girls to carve, cook deer.

COMPARING WEAPONS, veteran Troy hunter, Mansel Coleman, 81, checks bow of Daryl Ray, 9.

TRAVELING IN STYLE, duck hunters come slowly home from the blinds in a high-wheeled buckboard, after getting limit at California's Stillbow Gun Club.

SURE SHOOTING, SOLID COMFORT

By tradition and by fact, hunting has always been a hard sport, full of fatigue and frustration. But kings used to make their hunting easy with elaborate preserves and there are people today willing to pay for certain shooting with a minimum of discomfort. Milwaukee's Rainbow Springs Club has birds flown over members' guns, charging them $300 a year plus $4 a pound for bagged birds. The Chesapeake Gun Club on Utah's Bear River Marsh does not try to ease a hunter's life, but it possesses a natural luxury (opposite page) which cures chills suffered in blinds.

TAME TARGET for hunters at Wisconsin's Rainbow Springs Club, a penraised mallard is released on hilltop. The duck flies to lake where gunners wait.

CHOICE BIRDS, a day's bag of duck and pheasant, are proudly displayed by chef in plush Frank Lloyd Wright-designed dining room at Rainbow Springs Club.

HOT SPRINGS BATH of mineral water provides community tub for hunters — at Utah's Chesapeake Club, only hunting club in the country with this luxury.

MOSCOW'S 'GENIAL REAPPRAISAL'

For weeks it has been evident that the rulers of the Kremlin have been recasting their foreign policy in a "genial reappraisal." They have been extending a friendly hand, or at least some friendly talk, not only to the disaffected populations of their satellites, but also to the West as a whole, and most recently to the U.S. in particular.

What has happened? An obvious effort is being made to remove some of the discontent within the satellites. For example, one of the injustices which drove Tito out of the Soviet camp was the formation of "joint stock companies," ostensibly for mutual management of industries, but actually to exploit the satellites as colonies. Several of these joint companies have recently been abolished in Romania, Bulgaria and in Manchuria (where Red Chinese were the junior partners). Moreover, the Kremlin is now courting Tito as assiduously as it once sought to destroy him. As for the West, the Soviets have sufficiently relaxed their xenophobia, since Stalin's death, so that hundreds of delegations of all sorts and nationalities (Clement Attlee's being the most notable) have visited there so far this year. To one recent visiting American congressman, both Premier Malenkov and Deputy Premier Khrushchev took pains to bespeak high admiration and regard for General Eisenhower as a former comrade in arms. And to all these visitors the new rulers of Russia express, apparently with a convincing show of sincerity, their desire to live in peace with the rest of the world.

Whatever this means, it is a new situation which evidently will be with us for some time, and one which will keep all the experts sweating to figure out what shifts in our own policies are required to meet it. On that subject, Life will undoubtedly have other things to say later on. At the moment we shall merely sketch out the probabilities as we see them now.

The Kremlin has always had a minimum, as well as a maximum, goal in its foreign policy. One goal was to capture all of Korea, but when that proved impossible without big war, the minimum of status quo was accepted. The maximum goal of capturing all of China was realized; a minimum goal of part of Indochina was accepted, in a new sort of appeasement which alone gave Malenkov & Co. reason enough to feel genial. They may simply be talking softly while whittling a bigger stick to clobber us. The hard-boiled view is that none of these shifts represents any basic change in the Soviet determination to gobble up the world, but simply a new effort, like the Picasso peace dove and the Stockholm petition, to keep us from recognizing what they are really doing.

Yet there are others, notably Britain's Lord Coleraine, who are convinced that the Soviets genuinely seek peace, for the same reason Americans seek it, out of a fear that nuclear war would destroy the world. As Lord Coleraine puts it, they are materialists who are now finally getting more material goods out of their Communist machine and fear seeing them destroyed. Far more likely, as inveterate chess players, the Soviet leaders recognize the H-bomb race as a stalemate which nobody can win.

Whichever is true, the fact remains that even if the Communists try honestly to prevent a major war, they will still seek to capture the rest of the world by winning small civil wars (like the rebellions they have been stirring up in Algeria, Malaya, etc.) and by exploiting political decay, economic stagnation and racial hatred wherever they find them. It may well be that, for the moment, the struggle for the world, and men's minds, is shifting away from one of mere military might to one of economic and political rivalry. If we are to meet that test, we must make bigger plans by far than any yet undertaken, and move extremely fast.

First, we must prod the rest of the free world into shedding the last vestiges of colonialism, so that freedom's moral case, before the jury of the world's watchful millions, will have no blemishes.

Second, we must undertake the leadership of a world economic expansion of an immense order, whose object must be not only to help the former colonies create viable societies but to create general prosperity as a good in itself. This may require us to attempt multibillion-dollar "show window" projects, to enable nations like India to leap from a primitive economy to industrialism, or to enable resource-poor nations like Italy to find a way around these shortages.

Third, we must overcome the unjustified stigma, which the Communists have succeeded in making stick with that two thirds of the world's people who are colored, that our own color (in the main white) is a symbol of exploitation. For that reason we must keep improving our own race relations, in the awareness that the whole world watches our democracy like a laboratory. Moreover, our own colored citizens, as emissaries of this laboratory, can themselves carry the proof of its effectiveness to other nations. And our answer to all revolutionary shibboleths must be greater use of the manifest fact that America's own political and economic revolution has created a dynamic Capitalism which makes Communism look reactionary, as in fact it is.

This sort of battle, being political and economic, is more hopeful than the prospects of a major military one. But it calls for far greater flexibility and more brilliant planning. The only answer to "genial reappraisal" is to keep our powder dry, our ears open to genuine talk of peace and our minds alive to the vast dimensions of the problem.

STAND FAST BY FREE CHINA!

In our response to the new Soviet policy, let no one confuse the need to be flexible (see above) with the temptation to vacillate. They are not the same thing at all. The difference is well illustrated by our policy toward Nationalist China.

The British press reports that Washington is veering slightly toward the British view of China, i.e., pro-Mao Tsetung, anti-Chiang Kai-shek. We trust these reports are as false as the shift would be disastrous. Instead of vacillating, now is the time to confirm, wholeheartedly and beyond ambiguity, our support of the Chiang government.

His government is one of the solidest assets of U.S. policy in Asia. It is a military and strategic asset, since his army is a major obstacle to further Red conquests in Asia. It is a political asset, for as long as Taiwan remains free, millions of other Asians, including the ubiquitous bellwether overseas Chinese, will have continuing reason to know that the side of freedom is the side to be on.

U.S. vacillation toward Chiang in the past (1945–49) was responsible for one of the blackest pages in our history. Surely if that bitter lesson taught us anything, it is that the key to influence in Asia is steadfastness.

U.S. and Chinese diplomats are now negotiating a mutual defense pact which raises prickly questions about which of the Nationalist-held islands near Taiwan are defensible and with what types of arms. These questions should not blind us to the first requirement of a sound China policy, which is that we bind free China's fate and policy to ours with hoops of steel. Only on that basis will there be anything to defend.

A NEW GENERATION FOR THE SUPREME COURT

In New York last week 9-month-old Alice Newcomb looked up at her grandfather, John Marshall Harlan, newly appointed Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, as he had once looked up at his grandfather, also John Marshall Harlan, a Supreme Court justice. The present Harlan, who is 55, had just been named to the bench where his grandfather sat from 1877 to 1911. A lawyer with wide trial experience, he has been judge of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals since March, and now, subject to Senate approval, becomes President Eisenhower's second appointment to the Court.

As Senate debates censure, McCarthyites meet to hail their hero

"I'm back in shape," claimed Joe McCarthy. He was. As the Senate session to debate his censure got under way last week, 3,600 McCarthyites met in Washington's Constitution Hall. Joe made a "surprise" appearance, wept and vowed to fight "on and on."

But in the Senate, Joe got a far colder greeting. He infuriated Utah's Arthur Watkins by calling Watkins' committee, which filed the censure resolution, "the Communist party's involuntary agent." He drew a stinging rebuke from a Democratic member of the committee, Mississippi's John C. Stennis, who charged Joe with dealing in "slush and slime." The Senate Democrats seemed solidly for the committee's resolution. Some Republicans, hoping to get both Joe and the party off the hook, sought a compromise version. They urged McCarthy to offer a few apologies. But Joe gave no sign of wanting to get anybody off the hook.

TOM QUINN TOURED SENATE ON JOE'S BEHALF

KEY WITNESS Mrs. J. Spencer Houk, the first person to see Marilyn's bludgeoned body, described the scene . . . "so much blood it didn't look real." Mrs. Houk's testimony that the Sheppards' 6-year-old child was sound asleep in next room damaged the defense claim that Sheppard fought with an assailant. As the prosecution questions the witness, Defense Attorney William J. Corrigan (left) rises before Judge Edward Blythin to interpose one of his frequent objections.

'MURDER TRIAL OF YEAR'

State builds case against Dr. Sheppard, accused of killing his wife

What a British newspaper called "America's murder trial of the year" moved into an exciting week of testimony. In Cleveland the state was building up its case against Dr. Samuel Sheppard, the 31-year-old osteopath of Bay Village, Ohio charged with the murder of his pregnant wife, Marilyn.

The defense was out to prove Sheppard was a quiet-mannered man incapable of the foul act attributed to him. The prosecution, trying to prove no one else could possibly have done it, battered at Sheppard's story of a nocturnal intruder who forced his way into the house, bludgeoned his wife to death, then got away from "Dr. Sam" after a violent scuffle. Ironically it was the Sheppard family's friends who put into evidence the most harmful testimony against the accused. One testified that Marilyn had told her Sam had been thinking of a divorce. Another, Mrs. Houk, shown at the left in one of the courtroom drawings done for LIFE by Arthur Shilstone, gave evidence which threw doubt on Sheppard's story of a noisy scuffle. A third friend, the Bay Village policeman who first examined the murder scene, testified the Sheppard house showed no signs whatsoever of forcible entry. Even the dust on the windowsills, he swore, was undisturbed.

WICKED WINGS

Locust invasion hits Morocco

Out of the Sahara the black clouds rose, drifting lazily northward with the wind. As they approached the Sous valley in southern Morocco, the air defense service quickly broadcast the alarm: "Locusts are coming!" To meet the worst invasion in 31 years farmers rushed their cattle and children indoors, put out poisoned bran and smudge pots. But, as the clouds swarmed on, the crops vanished. The locusts were moving north, and if the winds carried them past the Atlas Mountains, all of northern Morocco would be open to invasion.

SHOW OF NEW HANDS

50,000 aliens become U.S. citizens on one day

From the Polo Grounds in New York clear across the country to the battleship Missouri in Bremerton, Wash. some 50,000 men and women stood in proud solemn throngs on Veterans Day last week to pledge allegiance to the U.S. Faces strained, right hands raised, they were about to be sworn in as America's newest citizens. It was the first time in U.S. history that citizenship was conferred upon so many people in so many mass ceremonies. Greeting 22 prospective citizens from 18 countries in the White House rose garden, President Eisenhower reminded them, "We expect you to carry the obligations just as you enjoy the rights and privileges."

DECKSIDE CEREMONY, held on mothballed Missouri, inducted 80 new citizens including three Japanese. On this deck Japanese signed surrender in 1945.

TICKET-FIXING RACKET

New York uncovers clever 'magic card' trick

A new twist to the old ticket-fixing racket came to light in New York City last week when investigators caught up with the "magic card" game. "Magic cards" and tiny badges were given to motorists by corrupt cops or other fixers. When arrested, a motorist produced this card with his license. If the cop was in on the racket, he kept the card. Later a contact man came around to the motorist, collected $10 or more and issued a new card. Some 100 motorcycle and patrol-car cops were believed involved in this well-mobilized "magic card" conspiracy.

CARD COLLECTION, seized in raids on suspected ringleaders, is examined in racket squad headquarters. Almost all cards bore names of motorists.

"MAGIC CARDS," like this replica, were inscribed on back with cop's name and police unit, making it easy for investigators to apprehend guilty officers.

BEHIND CLOSED DOORS and with their names kept secret, the first suspects testify to Brooklyn Rackets Grand Jury on operation of ticket-fixing ring.

MOBY DICK IS MISSING

Movie model of white whale eludes its pursuers

Skippers in the Irish Sea were alerted recently to beware of a "whiteheaded whale with a wrinkled brow and a crooked jaw," a 92-foot model of Moby Dick made for a movie of Melville's novel being filmed in the British Isles. The whale consists of a steel frame with rubber skin. Towed to sea, it spouted realistically for a whaling scene. But then it broke the towline. Caught, Moby Dick pitched so violently he had to be cut loose. He vanished among the big waves. The whale could easily damage a ship, and the RAF sent out search planes. But the movie Moby proved as elusive as the original evil whale and at week's end was still at large, a malevolent menace to the Dublin-Liverpool ferry.

IN OVERLOADED SAIL CANOES REFUGEES FLEE THE VIETMINH

Refugees on the water

Seven French warships headed by the aircraft carrier Bois Belleau—once the U.S.S. Belleau Wood—steamed along the Indochinese coast picking up as many as possible of a 40,000-man wave of Roman Catholic and Buddhist natives fleeing religious persecution in the territory recently taken over by the Communists. Moving through canals and rivers, the refugees had come down to the coast and then put to sea in canoes, rafts, sampans, and anything else that would float.

Angry Dutchmen were writing sizzling letters to their newspapers. A secret report by Police Commissioner Hendrik A.J.G. In 1939 he married, fathered three daughters.

Sobering affair in France

Frenchmen, many of whom believe that infantile paralysis is transmitted in water and that milk must always be regarded with suspicion, were faced with their greatest national pother since the brothels were boarded up in 1946. The government of milk-drinking Premier Pierre Mendès-France, striking at the national evil of alcoholism, upped the taxes on apéritifs 20% and forbade the cafes to sell hard liquor from 5 to 10 o'clock in the mornings, thus erasing in their wintery mornings

STEW'N TOMATO BISCUITS

A delicious new way to serve stew

There are two delicious "twists" to this recipe.

First, the use of Hunt's Tomato Sauce in the biscuits. Wait till you taste their exciting new flavor and see their appetizing color!

Second, the hearty flavor of the stew itself, which you get simply by using Hunt's Tomato Sauce in place of some of the water.

In the same ways, you can gain flavor for dozens of your own recipes with Hunt's Tomato Sauce. It's the all-tomato cooking sauce that blends so deliciously with other ingredients. No starchy fillers, no "soupy" taste! Enjoy it in casseroles, meat loaf and gravies!

2 lbs. stewing beef

1 cup peas

1 teaspoon salt

1 cup water

- 4 medium carrots, cut
- 2 cans Hunt's Tomato Sauce
- into pieces ½ recipe biscuit dough
- 1 large onion, sliced 1 cup sliced celery
- (use Hunt's Tomato Sauce as liquid)

Brown meat in greased 2-quart baking dish in moderate oven (375° F.). Add salt, 1½ cans Hunt's Tomato Sauce, water and onion. Cover, bake 45 mins. Add other vegetables. Cover, bake 45 mins. longer or till vegetables are tender. Prepare biscuit dough substituting ½ can Hunt's Tomato Sauce for milk. Roll about ¼-inch thick. Cut into six 2-inch biscuits. Increase temperature to 425° F. Place biscuits on top of stew. Bake about 20 minutes longer till biscuits are done. Serves 6.

Hear PHILCO with the amazing Electrostatic Speaker

...a Colonnade of 16 speakers in one!

Imagine yourself enveloped in a magic "Cloak of Sound" —sound so pure, so alive you hear every elusive note, every sibilant sigh of the strings.

Until now no phonograph could achieve such "presence" without distortion. Now, from the laboratories of Philco comes a miracle of smooth response clear up to 20,000 cycles.

It's the phenomenal Philco Electrostatic Speaker—first new speaker development in 30 years. Grouped together in a radial arc of 180° are 16 speaker columns. Each column radiates full-dimensional sound at a slightly different angle. The entire arc floods the room with a purity of sound far beyond the reach of conventional speakers.

New 1955 Philco High Fidelity Phonograph with Electrostatic Speaker. 3-speed automatic record changer. History-making low price! Philco 1347.

Somebody in your family needs one of these "New Look" Philco Radios . . . Could it be you?

Clock-Radio deluxe! Lulls you to sleep; wakes you to music or Buzzer. Turns appliances on, off. Philco 724.

"Personal" Portable Phono. 3-Speeds! Just plug-in and play. Your name in Gold on lid, FREE! Philco 1332.

Brilliant "New Look" table radio. Light, compact for use in any room. Ideal gift. Big value. Philco 580.

GETTING THE SCORE on other games, Sebo listens to the kitchen radio. With another tough schedule in 1955, he has only 28 men on freshman squad.

FORGETTING FOOTBALL, Sebo frolics with his 3-year-old son Jimmy just before bedtime. Jimmy's ambition is to grow up to be a football coach.

SCHOLARS' BIG BLOWS

Strong for sneezes and sniffles — soft for tender chapped noses

A SIMPLE TEST. Hold any non-wet-strength tissue under the faucet. Water makes a hole instantly

HOLD A NEW SCOTTIE under the faucet. You will see how it holds water without going to pieces

In school or at home, new "wet-strength" Scotties pass every tissue test with honors. They wipe small "runny" noses neatly without crumbling. They don't tear even under a grownup's gusty sneeze. At outdoor sporting events, they stand up to your nippy-weather sniffles without going embarrassingly to pieces.

Yet they are softer than ever on tender coldchapped noses.

New Scotties remove make-up neatly and efficiently too-blot up the "wettest" face creams, the greasiest lipsticks without messy shredding or linting.

Now that winter is almost here, be sure to keep plenty of Scotties handy for the family's added needs. In the big family box or the handy vanity size-they are another great Scott value. Scotties are thrifty. SCOTT PAPER COMPANY.

NEWEST TRANSPORT CONCEPT is Lockheed's C-130A turbo-prop assault transport, shown here in its dramatic first flight. Now in quantity production at Government Aircraft Plant No. 6 (GAP-6), operated by Lockheed's Georgia Division in Marietta, Georgia, this giant plane literally jumped off the runway in one-third the distance normally required for today's commercial airline transports.

6 New Lockheeds for U.S. Protection

Powerful Team Includes Truly Amazing Jet Fighter, High-Speed Assault Transport and Vital Picket Plane

When you go to bed tonight, you can sleep easier because of the remarkable development of U.S. air power in recent years. A vital part of this development is Lockheed's unique team of new defenders, a wide variety of aircraft that alone would constitute the entire air force for most nations.

These new planes help the U.S. Air Force and the U.S. Navy protect our Pacific shores from Alaska to Mexico and our entire Atlantic seaboard. They include sub hunters, long-range patrol bombers and a flying radar station with radomes as big as swimming pools to warn the nation hours earlier of enemy air attack. And other new models, too secret to photograph or talk about, include the XF-104 Day Superiority Fighter, now undergoing rigorous Air Force evaluation tests, so successful the Air Force already has issued a production contract for an undisclosed quantity.

The new aircraft on these pages come from Lockheed's California Division in Burbank and Lockheed's Georgia Division in Marietta, Georgia, where Lockheed is proud to operate Government Aircraft Plant No. 6 (GAP-6), the nation's largest integrated aircraft factory.

This is the Lockheed XFV-1 Vertical Ascender, a revolutionary new concept of aircraft developed in cooperation with the U.S. Navy. Now, every ship can have its own protective fighter umbrella, every area the size of an ordinary back yard can become a landing field.

NEW NAVY ADVANCED JET TRAINER. Often called the world's safest jet airplane, Lockheed's new T2V-1 advanced trainer for the U.S. Navy has so many new safety and performance features it can be used for carrier landing and takeoff and can utilize existing short fields for propeller aircraft. By training better jet pilots quicker, this trainer boosts Navy's ability to protect America. Another product of close Navy-Lockheed design teamwork.

ADVANCED GUIDED MISSILE SYSTEMS DEVELOPMENT

Eminent scientists, nuclear physicists, and engineers have joined forces at Lockheed's new Missile Systems Division in Van Nuys, California. Their mission is to solve the nation's prime defense problem, to give our armed forces totally reliable means of delivering our defensive and retaliatory weapons to their targets. To accomplish this vital task, Lockheed has appropriated $10,000,000 for a program of laboratory research and development.

Natural-shouldered suit becomes a new male uniform

The "Ivy League look," identified with determinedly inconspicuous New England males for over 50 years and with Madison Avenue advertising men for the past 10, has now got out of eastern hands and is making its way across the country (left and below). It has also got away from upper-bracket tailors and into the hands of cut-rate clothiers like S. Klein, whose advertisement (right) gives as complete and compact a definition of the look as has ever been written. The popularity of the natural-looking suit has widened quickly in the last two years as men became dissatisfied with pale bulky suits and flashy ties left over from their postwar splurge. Although the authentic Madison Avenue uniform perpetuated by Brooks Brothers. and campus-originated shops like J. Press (p. 70) has nonexistent shoulders and fits so snugly that it looks a size too small, facsimiles from volume clothing manufacturers and tailors are less severe in cut. To reaffirm their individualism beleaguered Ivy Leaguers are considering adding a fourth button to their jackets or resorting to a radical new silhouette (p. 72).

Its slopeshouldered product, which the Press boys consider the only acceptable dress for a normal Yale man, has scarcely changed over the years. Press has branch stores in New York and in Cambridge and maintains traveling representatives to replenish the wardrobes of scattered alumni customers. Sometimes regarded as more of a club than a clothes shop, J. Press is delighted rather than dismayed that its look is now capturing the country.

NEW Greaseless way to keep your hair neat all day

New Vitalis with V-7 relieves dryness, makes hair easy to manage

The gentleman above manages to keep his hair in excellent condition from morning till night-and he does it without grease! He uses new Vitalis with V-7.

You'll find no animal, vegetable or mineral oil in new Vitalis. It keeps your hair neat with V-7, the greaseless grooming discovery.

You can use it often even every day

Greaseless Vitalis doesn't "pile up" on your hair. So you can use it as often as you like-even every day-yet never have an over-slick, plastered-down look.

What's more, Vitalis gives you wonderful protection from dry, brittle hair and parched scalp - whether they're caused by outdoor exposure or your morning shower.

And tests show Vitalis kills on contact the germs many doctors associate with infectious dandruff-as no mere cream or oil dressing can.

So try new Vitalis with V-7! You'll like it. And ask your barber for a professional application. He's an expert on making your hair look its best.

"My hair is dry and stubborn so I use Vitalis every day."

AUTHOR LEADS HIS ACTORS

AT REHEARSAL, Odets behaves like a symphony conductor, urging and cajoling actors and exploding with approval when they do well.

Playwright Clifford Odets undertakes the hard job of launching his new comedy

Special kinds of Broadway agony attach to a playwright watching his play go into rehearsal, and to a director putting a play through its rehearsal weeks. In a big bare room, Clifford Odets, celebrated as a playwright, was dovetailing these agonies by directing his own new comedy, The Flowering Peach, which will open on Broadway next month. Treating his actors gently, like a father teaching his child to walk, Odets went over the tone, the tempo, the motivation of every sentence. The actors, for the most part, had the lines memorized so they could concentrate on learning the action of the play, a biblical comedy of Noah's struggles to launch his ark amidst his own family squabbles. The sessions were deceptively gentle, for under them—as at all rehearsals—lay the tense, urgent drive to attain perfection in a few short weeks of practice.

AS NOAH, Menasha Skulnik rehearses a scene in which he confesses to God he is too little a man for the big job of building the ark.

NOAH'S SON (Martin Ritt) says to his frantic father, "Everybody in this room loves you, but nobody thinks you're in your right mind."

GRATEFUL DIRECTOR kisses Skulnik while Mrs. Noah (Berta Gersten) watches. Says Odets, "This is going to be a beautiful scene."

A BRIGHT NEW FRESHNESS greets your eyes and tells you: Buick's done it again.

You see it in the bold distinction of that gleaming Wide-Screen Grille. You see it in the rakish sweep of the rear-end contours. You see it in the whole fore-and-aft newness of fleetlined grace that marks Buick the beauty thrill of 1955.

New horsepower-up to 236

You learn more when you get the power story. Up to new peaks go the horsepowers of every Buick V8 engine — a walloping 188 hp in the low-price Special — a mighty 236 hp in the Century, Super and Roadmaster.

And it's new, more responsive, far abler power you can literally feel as you go.

But even bigger Buick news for 1955 is something more than style and power. It's what the "variable pitch propeller" now has done for Dynaflow Drive.*

Up goes performance—and gas mileage too

When you find it necessary to push the pedal to the floor board, you do more than call on the greatest high-compression V8 power in Buick history.

You do what a pilot does when he heads his plane down a runway.

You do in oil what he does in air—you cut down take-off time by using "variable pitch propellers."

In this case, the propeller blades are inside the Dynaflow unit. But they're engineered to swivel or change their "pitch" just the 1955 Buick

-new thriller in style-power-performance like plane propellers—and with the same result: one pitch for getaway, another pitch for gas-saving fuel efficiency.

And what you get in the way of instantaneous safety-surge with absolute smoothness, you can only believe when you feel it.

This you have to try

Of course, we want you to come and see the trend-setting new Buicks—look into the betterments in gasoline mileage that add new thrift to these spectacular cars.

But this year, "seeing" is only the beginning. So—while you join the crowds viewing the new Buicks this week end, make a date to get behind the wheel as soon as you possibly can. We promise you the thrill of the year.

SPORTS

THE HAVOC OF HURLING

Irish champions demonstrate their rough sport

Hurling, the Irish national game, is a sport in which teams of strong young men in short pants line up 15 to a side with spoon-shaped shille-laghs called camans and try to bat a hard, leather-covered ball into each other's goal. A blend of field hockey and lacrosse, the game is played regularly by enthusiastic Irish-American emigrees in New York from early spring almost to winter. The big event of the 1954 season took place when County Cork, the All-Ireland champions, came over to play an all-star team of New Yorkers at the Polo Grounds. Although the rules forbid swinging at an opponent with a stick or fist, players were felled throughout the game (below and next page). The bloody violence, said Christy Ring who led the Irish team to a 29–19 triumph, was routine. "It was nothing," he remarked, "compared to when we play at home."

York goal tender Patrick Fleming misses high shot which passes over crossbar for a one-pointer. Ball hit into the net is scored a goal, worth three points.

A tiptoe touch...so easy to use

... a new kind of electric typewriter

You and your boss should compare what your present machine does for you with the five chief advantages of the new Royal Electric. All set?

Speed-flo Keyboard. Race through "Now is the time for all good men, etc.," or any speed sentence. Or, start copying a difficult invoice.

Immediately, you'll discover that here is a lighter, smoother, faster touch than that found on any electric typewriter yet designed. Your Royal Representative will show you the seven major keyboard improvements that make it possible.

Repeat Keys. Try them once and you'll say, "This is really living on a typewriter!" Automatically underscore all across the page . . . or make hyphens . . . or space backward and forward—just by holding down the appropriate repeat key.

You can't make a mistake, because on the new Royal Electric the repeat keys are independent of the regular keys. A Royal Electric exclusive!

Instant Space-Up Key. Ever been in the middle of a line and wanted to space up without reaching for the carriage knobs? The commonest situation is "Yours truly" with the writer's name about four spaces below. On the new Royal Electric, the Instant Space-Up Key clicks up as many spaces as you like? Simple. What could be simpler?

Copy Control. Carbons that look like a very shaggy dog turn up in every office. Lady, relax! Sparkling carbons now are your meat with this major improvement. Just have the Royal Representative show it to you.

Quiet Carriage Return Mechanism. Remember how carriages used to come bouncing back with a jolt that would jar your back teeth? Not now. No, sir! Royal's new mechanism is the quietest, smoothest, and fastest in the field.

Coming in a variety of colors, the new Royal Electric is a joy to the eye . . . easy as pie to use. Ask for a demonstration.

How do Italians make Spaghetti Sauce? With meat—like this!

HOW LONG has it been since you sat down to such a tantalizing dish? Steaming spaghetti, topped with a rich, thick meat sauce that tastes just exactly like the slow-simmered kind Italians make.

In this case, the meat sauce is FRANCO-AMERICAN Spaghetti Sauce. And of all spaghetti sauces, we believe you'll agree it tastes the most like "home."

The recipe for it is quite complicated and

Valuette est

"Italian." First of all, it includes meat—fine quality beef, chopped into juicy bits. And there are thirteen other ingredients—such as onions and parsley and garlic and tomatoes and spices.

If you cooked a sauce like this at home, it would take you hours to prepare. But when you serve FRANCO-AMERICAN Spaghetti Sauce, all you do is heat it! Three or four minutes—and you're ready to ladle it out.

Just for fun, see how many people ask you for the recipe when you serve this "homemade" Italian-style sauce. (You can tell them it's a deep, dark secret. It is.)

Best of all, this enticing, homey-tasting sauce costs less than 8 cents a serving!

THEIR CROPS SUPPORTED BY TIGHT-FITTING, COLORFUL HALTERS, A PAIR OF TEXAS GOBBLERS (FOREGROUND) AND FIVE HENS STAND ABOUT IN A BARNYARD

GAILY GARBED GOBBLERS

Texas farmwoman's snug halters support her turkeys' sagging crops and boost their market value

Pecking away in the barnyard, turkeys fill up their crops with food, which normally then passes to the stomach. But occasionally a bird's crop grows so enlarged it retains food indefinitely, swells out and sags like a goiter. This defect, called "pendulous crop" and possibly an inherited tendency, detracts from the market value of the bird. Discovering pendulous birds on her turkey farm, Mrs. Wyatt McLaughlin of Lockney, Texas tried massage and surgery without success. Then she turned to the well-established principles of the lingerie trade. Sewing together halters, she fitted them to the birds, found they uplifted the crops gently but firmly, reducing the sag and allowing grain to pass along more easily.

WITH HIS TRUSTY GLASS, ZOLTAN HARASZTI EXAMINES A RARE BOOK IN THE BOSTON PUBLIC LIBRARY

A VERY PROPER SWINDLE

Expert uncovers century-old masterpiece of thievery by three Bostonians of three of world's rarest books

by ROBERT WALLACE

A FINE old crime has a charm and an aroma that no raw new product can imitate. Here is a delicate little masterpiece without a hint of violence or a whisper of bad taste, in which all that happened was that three Bostonians stole three books. So skillful was the job that it was 25 years before the victims even realized that they had been superlatively diddled. Today, a century afterward, the rich bouquet of it all is just beginning to develop. It seems that the book involved in the most famous sale of recent times is—as the term is applied to stolen goods—a hot item.

The story of the crime has never before been told in all its succulent detail. In fact it was only a few moments ago, as the life of this deplorable but immortal accomplishment is measured, that the last fragments of it were pieced together by Mr. Zoltán Haraszti, Keeper of Rare Books at the Boston Public Library. A few cloistered bibliophiles have known of it, but even their knowledge has been incomplete until now.

Recently Mr. Haraszti, a scholar and an authority on John Adams (John Adams & the Prophets of Progress), sent into the library's vaults for a valuable volume he wished to examine. Mr. Haraszti has been delving into the old mystery for some time and had concluded that he might possibly find something of interest in that particular rare book.

The book that Mr. Haraszti wished to look at was encased in a little box of leather. He opened it, removed the book and opened the book to its flyleaf. He stared with great curiosity at the flyleaf, turned the book to and fro to catch the light. When he held it just so, he saw a very dim, faded—and very cryptic—note in pencil. Mr. Haraszti read the note. His were the first eyes to read it, very likely, in a century. It irritated him; indeed, it made him angry, because he had the knowledge to understand it in all its peculiar significance.

Time is like an onion with layers that can be peeled off. To understand Mr. Haraszti's anger one must begin by peeling off nearly eight years.

ON the evening of Jan. 28, 1947, at the Parke-Bernet Galleries in New York City, there occurred an exceedingly dramatic auction. The object for sale was a little book, about the size and shape of a 25¢ drugstore paperback, which was 307 years old. Most of the people who had gathered to make offers, or simply to watch, were in evening clothes, as a gesture of respect not for each other or the galleries but for the book. The connoisseurs in the audience were scarcely surprised when the auctioneer announced an opening bid of $30,000, although a few sightseers gasped.

For several minutes the crowd sat murmuring, but no other offer was made. Then the Scribner Book Store and a representative of Bibliophile A.S.W. Rosenbach edged into the deep water. Scribner's was represented by David Randall, who was prepared to bid up to a startling figure—$90,000. Rosenbach was represented by John Fleming, who also was prepared to go very high, although he thought he might There's nothing seasonal about thirst. And nothing that answers thirst like Sunkist Frozen Lemonade! So it does make sense to enjoy it any time you want refreshment.

So healthful, too. Sunkist Frozen Lemonade is a natural fruit-juice drink. And it's a good source of the vitamin C you need daily in winter to ward off colds.

Sunkist is the brand to get. Produced by the Sunkist Growers themselves from their own fine, juicy California lemons. The best—yet it costs only a few cents a glass.

get the book for about $85,000. But unlike Randall, Fleming had no established ceiling. His employer, Dr. Abraham Simon Wolf Rosenbach, was then—he died two years ago—the world's foremost rare book dealer, and a wealthy man.

Fleming and Randall kept up a slow, steady battle for perhaps half an hour. When the bidding reached $72,000 the most knowledgeable of the spectators were in a state of great tension and excitement, realizing that that sum was a major landmark in the history of book collecting. In 1933 John Fleming, representing Dr. Rosenbach, had bought a First Folio of Shakespeare for $72,000, which had stood until this evening as the largest price ever paid for a book in the English language sold at public auction.

The two rare-book men, wrapped in struggle, gave no sign that $72,000 meant any more to them than 72¢. Presently the bidding reached $80,000.

The little volume on display in the glass case was called the Bay Psalm Book: its correct title was The Whole Booke of Psalmes Faithfully Translated into English Metre. This particular copy was described in the auction catalog as the "Crowninshield-Stevens-Brinley-Vanderbilt-Whitney" copy, the names denoting its previous owners. Its most recent owner had been the late Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney.

Fleming and Randall kept on. Randall, who had thought his $90,000 would be ample, could see defeat ahead. Nevertheless he made his final bid boldly, as though he were well prepared to continue. When Fleming topped it, Randall dropped out. For a moment it appeared that Fleming would get the book at that point, but then suddenly a new bidder appeared. Up rose Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt ("Sonny") Whitney, son of the book's late owner, saying in a firm voice, "One hundred thousand dollars."

Fleming felt as though he had been stabbed but gave no outward sign. He glanced briefly at Sonny and topped his bid by $1,000.

When Whitney made it $105,000, Fleming again raised him $1,000, and here the true bibliophiles in the audience flirted with thrombosis. The highest price paid at a public sale for any book anywhere at any time had been $106,000, given in 1926 by Dr. Rosenbach for a Gutenberg Bible.

"One hundred ten thousand dollars," said Sonny.

Fleming quietly raised another $1,000.

"One hundred fifteen thousand dollars," said Sonny. Fleming bid $116,000.

"One hundred twenty thousand dollars," said Sonny.

Fleming had maneuvered himself into a small strategic advantage. He could raise $1,000 at a time while Whitney, already committed to the steamroller technique, had to raise by $4,000 or appear to be quibbling. The bidding continued in this way until it reached $150,000. At that point, Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney was through.

"One hundred fifty one thousand dollars," bid Fleming grimly, and the book was his. More accurately, the book was Rosenbach's, and more accurately still it was the Yale library's, the Rosenbach Company having acted as agent for a group of people who wanted to present it to the university as a gift.

Although it is a very tidy, in fact immaculate, sum, $151,000 is not the highest price ever paid for any written or printed book but merely the highest price an individual has ever paid. Governments and institutions have topped it on two occasions. The alltime record, as far as anyone knows, is $511,250 paid by the government of Great Britain for a manuscript Bible called the Codex Sinaiticus. The second highest price on record is $165,000 for the Bedford Psalter and Hours and the $151,000 for the Bay Psalm Book is third. However, there are some things about this particular $151,000 book more interesting than its price. It is one of three expertly filched a century ago by three very proper thieves.

Now one must peel a great many more layers off the onion.

▼N September 1638, 18 years after the landing of the Pilgrims, the ship John arrived in the Massachusetts Bay Colony from London, carrying the first printing press ever to be set up in what is now the U.S. The press was established in Cambridge and operated by a locksmith named Stephen Daye. The first thing Daye printed was the Freeman's Oath, a broadside; the second was an almanac, a pamphlet. The third was the Bay Psalm Book, the first book and in point of survival the earliest printed matter, no copy of the Oath or the almanac having endured.

The Pilgrims brought with them from England various established translations of the Psalms but disliked them all. So the ministers of the colony (in that day, any man educated for the ministry could read Greek, Latin and Hebrew) took a portion each to be translated, and produced their own, Puritan versions. "Thirty pious ministers" in all worked on the translations, the chief being Richard Mather, Cotton's grandfather. The poetry was terrible; what they did to the 23rd Psalm will stand forever as a warning that Puritans should keep their bony fingers out of literature.

> The Lord to me a shepheard is, want therefore shall not I. Hee in the folds of tender-grasse, doth cause mee down to lie: To waters calme me gently leads Restore my soule doth hee: He doth in paths of righteousness: for his names sake leade mee. . . .

The book is printed in octavo and has 147 leaves, or 294 pages. The title page has a crude ornamental border, with the date 1640 at the bottom. The edition consisted of 1,700 copies, enough for each family in the colony to have one. Of all of these, only 11 are known to have survived. Four are perfect (though one of these is "made up" with alien leaves and another is badly soiled); three slightly flawed; and five incomplete, lacking a varying number of leaves. The book is therefore valued because of its physical rarity, not its beauty, and because as an expression of the American spirit it must be put on the same shelf with the original copies of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution.

In 1703, when the book was still relatively common in New England, the Reverend Thomas Prince of Boston began to collect the great "New England library" which he bequeathed in 1758 to the Old South Church, of which he was pastor for 40 years. In his 55 years as book collector, Prince managed to lay his hands on no fewer than five copies of the Bay Psalm Book. He was very well aware of their worth. In his will he was explicit beyond question. He stipulated that his library "be kept entire." His books were to remain together in the library not for a decent interval, or a century, but unequivocably "forever." When the Reverend Thomas Prince said "forever," he meant forever.

Around 1820 a portion of the Prince library was sent to the Massachusetts Historical Society, upon which the Rev. Mr. Prince's shade must have ground its ethereal teeth. In 1866 the whole collection was reunited and deposited in the Boston Public Library, where it has remained ever since. But by that time only two of the five copies of the Bay Psalm Book remained: the other three had been "given" away.

EDWARD A. CROWNINSHIELD, whose name is listed as "first" owner (after Prince) of the $151,000 copy which was sold at the auction, was a wealthy adornment to Boston society. He is memorialized in the Proceedings of the Massachusetts Historical Society for 1879-80. To save one the trouble of having to go downstairs to consult one's copy of the work, parts of the memoir are here quoted: "He was a man of very prepossessing manners and appearance. . . . Born to a competent estate . . . he had a love of literature and a love of books which supplied him with object and purpose. . . . In his acquisitions he was guided by knowledge, sagacity and, above all, exquisite taste. He wanted the best editions of the best books, and not only that, but that they should be bound in the nicest and most appropriate manner. His library was not very extensive, but it was very choice. . . . His mind, his manners, his speech exhaled the fine perfume of scholarship and cultivation. . . ."

In contrast to the elegant Mr. Crowninshield, Samuel T. Armstrong was something of a bourgeois. It is true that Samuel T. Armstrong served as lieutenant governor of Massachusetts from 1833 to 1835, serving briefly in the latter year as acting governor. But he was, alas, an ordinary sort of fellow. Daniel Webster knew him, and scorned him as "one of the common people." However, Samuel T. Armstrong, in the latter years of his life, occupied a position of considerable interest to Mr. Crowninshield. Mr. Armstrong was a deacon of the Old South Church.

On the flyleaf of one of the two copies of the Bay Psalm Book which still remain in the Prince Library (i.e., in the Boston Public Library) there is the dim, cryptic note in pencil which Mr. Zoltán Haraszti recently discovered. It says: "This book was bound at the cost of Mr. Ed Crowninshield and given in exchange for No. 259 in the catalog. Jan. 1850. STA." The reference is to the first catalog of the Prince Library printed in 1846; Entry No. 259 consists of a single line: "The Whole Book of Psalms, translated into English metre. 1640. (Perfect copy)." The "STA" of course stands for Samuel T. Armstrong.

MBIGUOUS, isn't it?" says Mr. Haraszti. "If the grammar is A right, the note means that Crowninshield gave a copy—the one with the penciled note-in exchange for the perfect copy, No. 259, which he obtained. It also means that he had that copy -again, the one with the note-freshly bound. But this was not the case. Crowninshield gave only the binding and not the book. The title page still has the shelf number it once had in the parsonage of the Old South Church."

The binding provided by Crowninshield is cardboard covered with imitation black leather. Today it would cost about three dollars; in 1850 it could scarcely have been worth more than a dollar. "It would have been better," continues Mr. Haraszti, "if Mr. Crowninshield had spared himself this expense. The margins of the book would not then have been cut by the binder."

Mr. Haraszti guesses that what happened, 104 years ago in the church parsonage, was this: Mr. Ed Crowninshield (exhaling the fine perfume of scholarship and cultivation) called on Samuel T. Armstrong and suggested a deal. The bindings on those five old books must have been getting pretty shabby, after 210 years, and Mr. Ed Crowninshield would be kind enough to have a new binding put on one of them, if Mr. Armstrong would be kind enough to let Mr. Crowninshield have one of the extras.

What motivated Mr. Crowninshield is obvious—even in 1850 a Bay Psalm Book was a rare and valuable object, and everyone who knew anything about books was aware of it. What motivated Mr. Armstrong to make the deal can only be guessed at; perhaps Daniel Webster's calling him "one of the common people" stuck in Mr. Armstrong's craw. He may have wanted to do a big, secret favor for one of the uncommon people, thus hoisting himself onto the uncommon man's level. In any case he did it, and left a guilty sort of note to record it.

After Crowninshield's death his copy of the book was bought by a famous London book dealer named Henry Stevens, who sold it to George Brinley of Hartford, Conn. for $750. When Brinley died in 1879 the book was bought by Cornelius Vanderbilt for $1,200, and it remained in the Vanderbilt-Whitney family until the auction in 1947.

Very soon after Mr. Ed Crowninshield wangled his copy from Armstrong, Mr. George Livermore of Boston got another. No written record of this transaction remains, but the pattern is clear.

Mr. Livermore and Mr. Crowninshield were not merely friends but very close friends indeed. Crowninshield must have told Livermore of his accomplishment, because Livermore promptly got a second copy of the Bay Psalm Book from the church library, being probably responsible for the new, cheap binding on one of the leftovers.

Mr. Livermore was even more prominent in Boston than Mr. Crowninshield. In the Proceedings of the Massachusetts Historical Society his memoir runs to 54 pages; to his memory men such as Oliver Wendell Holmes and Edward Everett Hale paid affectionate tributes. Robert C. Winthrop, president of the society, said: "Ardent, intelligent, laborious, liberal, philanthropic, he was untiring in his exertions. His beautiful library—with its remarkable collection of rare editions of the Sacred Scriptures, including not a few Bibles which had the special charm of having belonged to illustrious persons of other ages and other lands. . . . Nor can anyone forget that exquisite bibliographical taste of his. . . ."

During his life Livermore traded away several of the leaves of his copy of the Bay Psalm Book (which was incomplete when he got it), thus greatly reducing its value. In 1894 it was sold by his estate to Alfred T. White of Brooklyn, N.Y. for $425, and is now in the private collection of White's son-in-law, Adrian Van Sinderen, also of Brooklyn.

The disappearance of the third copy of the Bay Psalm Book from the library in which it was to remain forever was arranged in a manner even more startling than the carrying off of the first two.

The Hon. Nathaniel B. Shurtleff, M.D., was a learned man and a formidable book collector. He has made all students of American history his debtors by printing in 11 volumes the records of the Bay and Plymouth colonies.

At the time Dr. Shurtleff obtained his copy, a gentleman named Loring Lothrop was one of the deacons of the Old South. Deacon

Lothrop was a former master of the Girls' High School, a position in which he may not have been fully exposed to the Sturm und Drang of Bostonian life. On Dec. 30, 1859, Dr. Shurtleff, who doubtless had seen Crowninshield's and Livermore's prizes, wrote Deacon Lothrop a letter, or rather threw him a wonderful curve:

"My Dear Sir: I am very desirous of obtaining one of the duplicate copies of the old Bay Psalm Book belonging to the Old South Church Library, having a strong veneration for the old volume. I think I have books in my library, such as would be not only appropriate for the Library of the Old South Church but also valuable for reference and for the use of those who may rely upon the library for works suitable to be consulted. Among the books which I happen to think of are the original editions of Winthrop's New England, and Belknap's New England Biography . . . which I would gladly give in exchange (for) one of the duplicates. . . .

Deacon Lothrop—one can imagine him all atwitter with excitement—promptly let Nath. B. Shurtleff have the best copy of the Bay Psalm Book. It was an author's copy, having been owned and autographed by Translator Richard Mather himself. The two books given in exchange by Shurtleff are now in the Prince Library, each bearing the inscription "Given to the Prince Library of the 'Old South Society' of Boston, Mass., by Nathaniel B. Shurtleff, M.D., in exchange for the 'Bay State Psalms.' Boston, Jan. 11, 1860."

Dr. Shurtleff's letter skillfully avoided any reference to the relative worth of the books. He spoke of the "original editions" of the books he wished to trade, and twice referred to the "duplicate" copies of the Bay Psalm Book. One may readily believe that he had "a strong veneration" for the latter. At the time he made his fortunate exchange, Winthrop's New England was worth about $5 on the market, and Belknap's Biography, $3. Today, of course, the price is higher. One might have to pay $15 for the two.

In 1867 Dr. Shurtleff was elected mayor of Boston. He served three terms in succession and died in 1874.

A year after Dr. Shurtleff's death and about 25 years after Crowninshield and Livermore extracted their copies, the Old South Church finally got sore. Two deacons sued Shurtleff's estate, demanding that his copy of the Bay Psalm Book be put back.

A short time ago Mr. Haraszti, in the fond hope that something might be discovered that might somehow right the ancient wrong, consulted the legal archives. "After a considerable search," he says, "the clerk located the old file and handed it to me. It contained about a dozen documents, summonses, briefs, affidavits—and that amazing letter of Shurtleff's to Lothrop. I don't believe anyone else has looked at the file since it was put away 79 years ago. Of course I should have known how the case turned out even before I looked at it. The deacons were too late—the statute of limitations had run."

After the failure of the suit, Shurtleff's copy was sold by his estate, has since passed through various hands, and is now in the John Carter Brown Library at Providence, R.I. As the finest of all existing copies, this one could be worth as much as $250,000.

The two deacons who finally summoned the guts to bring legal action on behalf of the Old South Church were named Avery Plumer and Frederick D. Allen. Plumer was a flour merchant and Allen the owner of a dry-goods store. Neither of them ever got elected mayor of anywhere; they did not belong to the élite of Boston society; they were not members of the learned societies; they were not even Harvard graduates. Neither, of course, is mentioned in the Proceedings.

Time, as it usually does, has largely mended the effects of the "exchanges" of a century ago. Mr. Zoltán Haraszti will never forget Crowninshield's "love of books" or Livermore's "exquisite bibliographical taste" or Shurtleff's "strong veneration for the old volume," since the result has been that Mr. Haraszti has three fewer rare books in his vaults. However, more people may see the Rev. Mr. Prince's Bay Psalm Books now than if all of them were still cheek to cheek on one shelf in Boston. This may have been the line that Messrs. Crowninshield, Livermore and Shurtleff took if they attempted posthumously to placate the Rev. Mr. Prince. It would have been exceedingly interesting to hear what the Rev. Mr. Prince had to say in reply.

WHAT THE LIBRARY GOT in return for one copy of Bay Psalm Book was book collection then worth about $8.

Englishman gets designs for bowls from sounds they make

David Rawnsley, a Londoner who has been an architect, engineer and moving picture producer, turned a couple of years ago to making pottery. Working with a very hard, baked clay, he found that when he tapped his bowls they gave off a ringing sound almost like that of crystal. Looking for some way to link this up with patterns for his pottery, he made oscillograms of each bowl's sound (next page). Then he photographed the wiggly lines and worked them into designs for the bowls.

Different taps, Rawnsley discovered, produced different patterns (above). A soft knock with a piece of clay made a complicated swirl. A brisk rap with a wooden mallet produced a simpler arrangement. Londoners, having seen the first of his singing pots at an art show, are keeping Rawnsley and his staff at their potter's wheels full time to meet the demand for more.

Wrap up the one really new thing in writing!

Enlarged view of Parker's Electro-Polished Point

The all-new PARKER 51 Pen with the ELECTRO-POLISHED POINT!

You tie a bright Christmas ribbon around the most important single development in writing when you give a new Parker "51" Pen. For its gleaming new Electro-Polished point (pictured above) reflects more hours of actual writing pleasure than anything that's happened to fountain pens in a dozen Christmases—and maybe more.

Look closely at this new point. You don't see a nick, a flaw or rough edge on it (as you would if this were even a superb hand-ground point). A new electro-chemical process, exclusive with Parker, has removed them all—leaving the point so mirror-smooth that it's a sheer, silken delight to touch it to paper. It makes you want to write!

You give so much else that's new in a Parker, too. A pen designed with only one moving part (nothing to repair). A pen with a Pli-glass ink sac (instead of rubber) and with filling made so easy that you draw in thousands of words just by squeezing two fingers!

See your dealer's beautiful gift selections now. Electro-Polished Parkers start at just $5.00. The Parker Pen Company, Janesville, Wisconsin, U.S.A.; Toronto, Canada.

TV Rides the Rainbow

The autumn of 1954 will go down in entertainment history as the time when television harnessed the rainbow and really started its first rush of multihued productions. So far only seven or eight hours of color shows are on weekly view over the networks and only some 10,000 color TV sets are in use. But 150 stations are equipped to splash color across the U.S. and the number is jumping every month.

Though the use of color TV is still limited, it is causing unlimited excitement in TV studios. CBS rushed the season in August with a single color telecast of Ed Sullivan's Toast of the Town, and NBC last month launched its handsome series of 33 "spectaculars" with a new musical comedy. Getting such big shows ready requires twice as much technical planning for color as for black and white. Since all color shows are also telecast in black and white, tints and tones must be carefully tested to be effective in either medium. Lighting must be three to five times its usual intensity; the CBS studio carries enough current to light the town of Danbury, Conn. Actresses become doubly fussy about costumes and make-up. Stage designers, knocking themselves out to create eyefilling sets, turn their studios into jungles of color, hung with cables and ablaze with light.

For the millions of TV viewers who have not yet had a chance to see TV color, Life reports on some of the season's new shows and the backstage hubbub which swirled around them.

> FANCY TRAPPINGS for Toast of the Town include carrousel (right), a knight on horseback and girls in mink. Standing by merry-go-round are Janice Paige and John Raitt; camera focuses down on Eartha Kitt, Ed Sullivan.

EARTHA KITT, in a spangled magenta outfit, was even more of an eye-stopper than usual as she clung to a carrousel and sang Monotonous on Toast of the Town.

An important message to everyone who takes aspirin for the relief of headaches, discomfort of colds, muscular aches and pains.

BUFFERIN acts twice as fast as aspirin!

Medical science knows that a pain reliever must go through the stomach and into the blood stream to relieve pain.

> Bufferin combines aspirin with two antacid ingredients, opens the stomach valve, gets the pain reliever into the blood stream twice as fast as aspirin.

So Bufferin acts twice as fast as aspirin to relieve pain.

Take two Bufferin tablets the next time pain strikes and get fast relief!

CATCHING COLD?
TAKE BUFFERIN!

Acts twice as fast as aspirin to relieve cold miseries.

Won't upset your stomach

Check these facts with your physician:

Ask your own doctor about Bufferin's ability to relieve pain and its freedom from harmful ingredients.

8 years of continuous medical research in hospitals and clinics have established Bufferin's effectiveness and speed. Bufferin has met the same rigid tests a doctor demands of medicines used in his own practice.

These tests prove the antacid ingredients in Bufferin speed the pain-relieving ingredient into the blood stream twice as fast as aspirin. They also protect you from the upset stomach aspirin often causes.

Note: BUFFERIN was first made available to the medical and dental professions in October, 1948. Since then, EACH YEAR, MORE AND MORE PEOPLE, by the hundreds of thousands, have switched from aspirin to BUFFERIN for faster relief of pain without stomach upset.

Most people take two Bufferin tablets as the usual dose.

P.S. If you suffer pain of arthritis or rheumatism, ask your physician about BUFFERIN.

WITH LONG EARS COCKED, CISCO THE BURRO STANDS PATIENTLY STILL AS BOBBY AND PHIL HOGAN TRY TO BRUSH THEIR NEW PET'S DARK, COARSE HAIR

A BOOM IN BABY BURROS

Phil and Bobby Hogan's friend Cisco is one of thousands imported from Mexico as children's pets

Cisco arrived in Scarsdale, N.Y. one morning in an express car on the 8:45 train and ever since has been leading a curious life for a burro normally brought up as a beast of burden in the Mexican mountains. As the new pet of Phil and Bobby Hogan, aged 5 and 3, Cisco lives in a steam-heated garage and is hand-fed every morning. Every afternoon he is carefully brushed, then saddled and taken out for his day's work—giving rides to Phil, Bobby, their two older sisters, and their friends. Through all this Cisco serves with a docility which has led to a boom in burros as pets for U.S. children.

The boom began last spring when the Spencer Gifts company of Atlantic City, N.J. advertised Mexican burros at $85 f.o.b. Texas and has been selling them at the rate of 40 a day. A good size for children (40 inches high), burros are hardy, live on hay and water and, except for stubbornness, are very placid. Cisco has settled down nicely in Scarsdale but has grown so used to having people around that now, if left alone for too long, he brays for company.

OKEFENOKEE DRIES UP

The worst drought in Georgia swamp's history makes life hard on all its inhabitants

Across 430,000 tangled acres in southeast Georgia stretches the Okefenokee Swamp, once the home of the Seminoles and, in the U.S., second in size only to the Everglades. Normally flooded, its rivers have dwindled to trickles and its wide lakes have sunk into stagnant pools. Fires smolder threateningly in the dry bogs of bladderwort and swamp grass, and flat-bottomed sightseeing skiffs are without waterways. Four years of drought have brought the swamp water to an all-time low.

The drought has had a mixed effect on Okefenokee's inhabitants. Fish have died by the millions and otters have been forced out in search of food. But the alligators are better off, for in the small pools fish and turtles are easier to catch. The drought has barely touched humans, since only one family, the Chessers, lives in the swamp (below). But it has brought an unexpected problem to an entirely different segment of Okefenokee's population (next page).

COON GOES BEGGING for a handout as meals grow hard to come by. Shrinking ponds reduced population of frogs and crayfish on which it lives.

AN EGRET TAKES OFF over dry swamp bottom. With fewer fish available, many of the water birds which feed on them have flown to the Everglades.

FAVORITE FISHING HOLE of Farmer Tom Chesser is dry. Said he, "It'll take a lot of water, it sure will, to put this swamp back to where it was."

DROUGHT PUTS POGO IN A PICKLE

The Okefenokee has grown celebrated in recent years as the whimsical home of Pogo and his friends, whose adventures are chronicled in Walt Kelly's cartoon. On learning that the swamp was drying up, Life asked Kelly what he was going to do about it. Kelly first thought of moving to the Dismal Swamp, then decided to face the music (below). But in the syndicated strip the swamp remains wet, and Kelly is praying for rain.

India's new solar stove enables U.S. backyard chefs to cook with sunshine

In India, a scorching land long on sun and short on fuel, a new stove has been developed that catches the sun's rays in a concave aluminum apron and reflects them with cooking intensity on the underside of a pan. The odd-looking contraption is fuelless, fireless, fumeless and sootless. But put on sale for 80 rupees ($16.80), in impoverished India it also proved just about buyerless. Imported by Abercrombie & Fitch Co. of New York, the Indian solar stove is being offered to gadget-loving American campers and backyard chefs for $75.

For best results it must be used at least two hours after dawn and two before dusk and should be given a short sunbath to warm up the pan. Then the cook, standing back to avoid being blinded, puts in his trout or hamburgers and lets them simmer for about half an hour until his meal is cooked-unless, of course, clouds close in and turn the solar stove off.

EXPERIMENTAL MODEL is tested in New Delhi by Dr. Madan Lal Ghai, who supervised its development.

NEW GIRL IS HELPED WITH SCHOOL TIE

LADYLIKE AND LEARNED

Cheltenham sternly trains English girls

Photographed for LIFE by ESTHER BUBLEY

In somewhat the way England's strength on battlefields has been forged on the playing fields of Eton and Harrow, the strength of her upper middle class homes and families has been formed by the rigors of her girls' schools, notably those like Cheltenham. A "ladies' college" for girls 11 to 18, Cheltenham sets its pupils in a relentless pursuit of learning and decorum, training them to be primly correct even while off campus (right). It has been this way at Cheltenham for 100 years, and now, starting its second century, Cheltenham does not want or expect to change.

One of England's largest girls' "public" (in U.S. terms: private) schools, Cheltenham Ladies' College draws its 760 students—at about $700 a year—mostly from professional families. Whether they go on to universities—as most do—or not, they leave as educated citizens. If, in a less rigorous world, they lose some of their primness, they never lose the sense of fitness that characterizes their class and their country.

GATHERED "IN THE GARDEN," students top off 20-minute midmorning break, which includes compulsory downing of bun and milk, with girlish gossip.

AT MORNING CHAPEL SERVICE THE UNIFORMED STUDENT BODY SITS IN DISCIPLINED SILENCE AWAITING APPEARANCE OF PRINCIPAL TO LEAD

10-MINUTE SESSION OF PRAYERS AND HYMN SINGING, THEN GIRLS GO OFF TO FIRST CLASSES OF THE DAY

PATIENT PORTER relieving the girls of menial chores, carts their book sacks to class buildings.

UNIFORMED SCHEDULE

From the 7 a.m. rising bell to lights out at 8:30 p.m. (for younger girls) to 10:30 p.m. (for older girls), the life of a Cheltenham girl can be told by the clock. When breakfast is out of the way, the girls line up in neat rows to head for prayers through corridors where they are never permitted to speak. The morning is given to classes whose teachers make stiff demands and keep the school's scholastic standards high. These over, the girls rush off to lunch at the school's 13 houses. Compulsory sports (pp. 142, 143) are followed by tea, and in turn by compulsory "prep" (short for preparation), supper, more prep and bed.

LATIN TEACHER, Miss A. M. Grant, occasionally interrupts a session in translations to josh slow student about the need for "boiling you publicly in oil."

A ROUTINE FOR RELAXING

CHEERING THEIR TEAMS, student spectators watch a field hockey match between boarding students and non-boarders. Most prized sports trophy is hockey stick that once belonged to a headmistress named Miss Faithfull.

ON THE PLAYING FIELD two girls devote a free period to practicing field hockey. To make one of the school or house teams, a girl must be able to dribble the ball between the chalked lines for a distance of at least 20 feet.

ON SATURDAY NIGHT junior girls remove their uniforms, put on mufti and, shoeless, cut loose in sitting room hijinks.

A BRISK BRUSHING is housemistress Miss G. Epitaux's method of helping a youngster be well groomed.

PREPARING FOR BED, a senior pours water left over after kitchen session of cocoa-making into friend's hot water bottle.

UNIFORM INSPECTION, from hat to shoes, is required before the girls leave grounds for church. Here housemistress's assistant straightens girl's skirt.

TEA AND TREATS

When a girl moves from one of the 11 "junior" houses into one of two "senior" houses, the starkness of her life eases somewhat. As a senior she may have a radio in her bedroom, although one housemistress makes a practice of confiscating any radio she can hear after 10 p.m. On free time she may go far afield—but only in supervised groups—to the outlying village churches, a favorite outing for Cotswold Club members (opposite page) whose main hobby is tracing brass designs. But within the town of Cheltenham itself she may not attend dances, ride in any public conveyance or walk on heavily trafficked streets. Much of the town actually is mapped out as "out of bounds" to all girls, and, senior or not, no girl is ever allowed to bicycle around the Cheltenham Boys' College.

DOING "TOAST DUTY," A GIRL INVITED TO SUNDAY TEA BY TWO OLDER SISTERS REPAYS THE FAVOR BY CARRYING BREAD SLICES TO THE TOASTER

PARENTS' FIRST VISIT, permitted only after a girl has been at the school three weeks, reunites Catherine Scrase (left) with family for a Sunday excursion.

PREFECTS "PIG IT" on outing that is special privilege of school monitors. Here they do away with a "tea" of bread, butter, cakes, jam, ice cream sundaes.

You can have that lovely kind of Judy Garland complexion

that's the beauty of LUX

Marginal notes by yours truly— Judy Garland

Lux lather penetrates the skin—cleanses thoroughly yet rinses away completely.
That's why Judy Garland, like 9 out of 10
Hollywood stars, uses it every day.
How about you?

Judy Garland's complexion is worth a fortune. But truthfully, isn't yours just as important to you? And doesn't it make sense to give your complexion the same careful care the stars do?

Hollywood stars depend on Lux Toilet Soap and use it regularly. In fact, more women all over the world buy more Lux than any other soap. There's a reason—many reasons.

Judy Garland, for example, stands by Lux's mildness and gentleness. There's nothing else like it. And she's especially fond of Lux's rich, creamy "rinse-away" lather. It penetrates the skin, really cleanses, but washes away completely—leaving no after-film to mar your complexion. Leaves nothing, in fact, but that fresh Lux glow.

Remember that Lever Brothers unconditionally guarantees that everything said about Lux Toilet Soap is true—and you may (have your money back) if you don't think it's the nicest complexion care you've ever had.

...only since I was 12, and made my first morie

— even when you've _ been wearing heavy theatrical make-up what could be fairer than that?

9 out of 10 Hollywood stars believe in it and today more women all over the world use Lux than any other complexion care.

COLLECTION OF KUDOS FOR GALANOS

SURROUNDED BY ELEGANCE, present and past, Galanos sits in Costume Institute of Metropolitan Museum where he received "Winnie." Live girls wear his new clothes in satin, brocade, wool ($325-$895). Designs on dummies go back 150 years.

29-YEAR-OLD DESIGNER MAKES OFF WITH TOP TWO FASHION AWARDS

This lone male seated tailor-fashion in a crowd of live models and wax dummies has found sudden success on the frontiers of fashion. After three short years in his own business, James Galanos, 29, Philadelphia-born of Greek parents, has won U.S. design's two most important annual prizes—the Neiman-Marcus Design Award and the Coty American Fashion Critics' "Winnie." After an apprentice-ship in Paris, Galanos started his business in Los Angeles in 1951 with $200 and a staff of two. Five dresses which constituted his first "collection" were snapped up by a local store. Now, with 50 workers, Galanos' designs sell to 45 top U.S. stores. This season he sold nearly 1,000 of a single $325 style. Galanos dresses (he makes no suits) are not radical in design but are intricately cut to look simple and are made of spectacular and expensive fabrics. Though makers of less costly clothes cannot copy the high-priced fabrics Galanos uses, they can—and undoubtedly will—try to achieve his effect of elegant simplicity.

LAST RITES FOR THE LATE HOT LIPS

Oran ("Hot Lips") Page, who died this month at the age of 46, was a man who lived for trumpet playing and was incapable of much melancholy. So the last rites which his friends held for him were not irreverent. After they had seen his remains to the train for burial in Dallas, the mourners trouped off to New York's drafty Stuyvesant Casino and there raised the roof in memory of a great jazz man.

New Orleans-style tunes in the Casino, and more than 200 musicians and a thousand jazz fans gathered there to honor him. Among them were (clockwise from top left) Eugene Sedric, George Stevenson, Gene Krupa, Myra Johnson, Conrad Janis, Eddie Shu and Jack Teagarden, who kept the room rocking even though the beer barrels ran dry early. It was the kind of crowd Hot Lips loved to play for, the kind that would get him to put down his horn and, in a gravelly voice, start singing Take Your Shoes Off Baby or Stop Running through My Mind.

Hot Lips Page, who was born in Dallas, started on the trumpet when he was 12. He led his own bands, later joined Artie Shaw's group as one of the first Negroes in an all-white band. The most famous of his records are St. James Infirmary Blues and The Hucklebuck, which he sang with Pearl Bailey. Though he was no imitator, his playing was often compared to Louis Armstrong's. "And if it weren't for that Satchmo," one mourning fan said, "Lips would have been the best."

THE FIRST 12 WEEKS

August 16th, as this was written, was a scant 12 weeks ago—but in those 12 eventful weeks, SPORTS ILLUSTRATED has started prize fights and settled ancient debates; it has provided spectacular department store displays and colorful TV and radio program fare. It has sold, for its advertisers, 2 out of 3 of the following products: ships, shoes, sealing wax; also sports cars, luggage, cameras, men's and women's apparel. It has been cut up by kids, bound in leather by executives, welcomed by mothers.

In its 3-month life, SPORTS ILLUS-TRATED's 851 pages of editorial (178 of them in full color) and 190 pages of advertising have opened a weekly window of magazine pleasure for more than 525,000 reader-families.

"I never realized that there could have been such a gap in our lives—until we began reading SPORTS ILLUSTRATED."—J. D. Gunther, V-P, Air Reduction Co., Inc., New York.

SPORTS ILLUSTRATED'S World

SPORTS ILLUSTRATED's business is pleasure. Here's where it has taken you in the three short months of its pleasant life. You started with the greatest race ever run between two humans. You wandered leisurely back through the golden history of great sports events.

Color cameras took you into the ring with Rocky Marciano, into the batter's box against Robin Roberts. You went to Saratoga for the sale of yearlings, rode a speedboat with the fastest man afloat. You had an expert's eye view of the U. S. Amateur, scouted the World Series, played golf at the Greenbrier, hiked in the Himalayas, and swam in the cool world underseas.

You've fished in the great Northwest, sailed to Bermuda, watched the ducks sweep down from the North—and maybe you've discovered, with SI's editors, that sports is a world without limit.

And the fun has only just begun.

"You have aroused my interest in other sports that I hardly read about previously." —Miss J. A., Salem, Mass.

The Writers

Each week SPORTS ILLUSTRATED has brought between the covers of a single magazine the finest writing that exists on sports. Outstanding authorities provide a regular battery of sports columns never before found in a single publication: Red Smith, Herman Hickman, John Bentley, Victor Kalman, Tex O'Reilly, Billy Talbert, Herb Wind bring to SPORTS ILLUSTRATED their appreciative, sometimes wry, always penetrating insights into the sports they have spent their lives enjoying.

Famous writers have turned their brilliant talents to the world of sports: John Steinbeck, James T. Farrell, Jerome Weidman, Cornelia Otis Skinner. And Paul Gallico has returned to sports—via SPORTS ILLUSTRATED.

"Never has it been such a pleasure to make out a check. SPORTS ILLUSTRATED is suberb, and is interesting in every respect." —Chester L. Kingsbury, 189 Court Street, Keene, N. H.

Circulation and Success

SI is priced high for a weekly, but not too high for those who appreciate the uniqueness of a national sports magazine. Its newsstand price is 25 cents. Its regular subscription price is $7.50. (Its $6.00 charter-subscriber offer was also the highest in magazine history.) Yet high price or not, the world of SPORTS ILLUSTRATED seems to be a hard world to resist.

Because of the originality of its idea, subscriptions exceeded 250,000 before the magazine even had a name. Newsstand sale was immediate and fast. Paid circulation since the first issue has been well over 500,000 copies.

Charter subscribers were given the option of paying their bills at the Charter rate, $6.00, or getting three months' additional copies for $7.50. Out of the first 200,000 checks received, 96,000 were for $7.50.

Subscription insert cards have appeared in several issues, for the convenience of families who had been away during the summer, and for newsstand buyers. More than 60,000 of these have come in to date, first at $6.00, then at the regular rate of $7.50.

"Since the days of the American frontier, sports have been the keynote of our way of life. Today, Americans have more time and income to indulge their love of sports. Translate this into dollars, and you come up with a multibillion dollar business..."

—Charles Harris, Pres., Zero King Sportwear.

Advertising Results

SPORTS ILLUSTRATED makes no claim that its impact alone has made business such a pleasure for its advertisers. But there does seem to be something about this wonderful world of sports that makes spending enjoyable. A few examples:

Eighty Ford dealers totalled more than $250,000 worth of orders as a direct result of Ford's Thunderbird announcement in SPORTS ILLUSTRATED.

A couponed ad in SPORTS ILLUS-TRATED for a leading life insurance company produced inquiries at a lower cost per thousand than any magazine carrying the copy.

One 71-line ad produced $5,000 worth of business for a golf club maker in less than 3 weeks.

A single announcement ad sold two $6,000 sports cars in the first two days after it appeared (the total is now 12).

The Pedwin Division of The Brown Shoe Company, reporting dealers' tie-ins up 75% in one month had 86% the next, said, "We never felt effects like this from magazine advertising before."

A motion picture camera manufacturer said, "The way dealers snapped up our products when we told them they were going to be advertised in SI, our campaign is already a success."

Cunard Lines' travel—L. L. Bean's famous sporting goods catalogue—Knox's new line of hats—Brooks Bros. clothing and many other advertisers report specific success from their advertising in SI.

111 New Advertisers

Since publication, 111 new advertising accounts have joined the 201 with which SPORTS ILLUSTRATED started in business. And 1955 plans show the pace of new business for SPORTS ILLUSTRATED is rapidly increasing.

"It brought us more action in our young sportswear department than we've had in two years."—John Brunelle, Buyer, Women's Sportswear, I. Magnin, Beverly Hills.

Shopping for Pleasure

The nation's department stores, who have long used sports as an up-beat merchandising theme, welcomed SPORTS ILLUSTRATED like Rock Hill, S. C., welcomed Dusty Rhodes.

Since publication, literally hundreds of stores in 311 cities have used SPORTS IL-LUSTRATED as a major selling medium. Somehow, something happens to sports themes that makes them make sales sense in SPORTS ILLUSTRATED—even unlikely subjects, such as poodles and ball players, football helmets and ducks and cowboys . . . as well as the new fabrics and the outdoor fashions.

"We are enthusiastic about your wonderful magazine, SPORTS ILLUSTRATED. We believe it fills a definite need in a most interesting and entertaining way.

"Sports are for women as well as men, and I like the way you cover both.

"Sportswear is the fastest growing group of departments in every store. We here at Halle's are grateful for anything that calls attention to the places and occasions on which sportswear is worn. SPORTS IL-LUSTRATED does both beautifully."— Marjorie Reich, Fashion Director, Halle Bros., Cleveland.

Influence

"Ezzard Charles came here to the University of Illinois to take a series of physical fitness tests under Professor Thomas K. Cureton. Charles read about Cureton's fitness tests in an article in SPORTS ILLUSTRATED... Charles said he feels that he has about 3-4 more good years left in him and these tests may help him regain the heavyweight championship."—
Edward J. Wojtas, Champaign, Ill.

The International Boxing Commission liked two ideas suggested in the August 16th issue by SPORTS ILLUSTRATED's boxing columnist Budd Schulberg (also well known, we understand, in the field of literature and the cinema). Result: 49,600 people paid 600,000 pesos in Mexico City to see a good fight; and a second, for the world's bantamweight title, is now pending.

The Winged Foot Golf Club in Mamaroneck, N. Y. picked up an idea suggested by another SPORTS ILLUSTRATED article, "Golf's Greatest Putt." Result: four former U. S. Open Champions attempted Bob Jones' great 1929 putt—under the eye of the master himself. Even a minor-sized N. Y. salle d'armes reported new fencing pupils as a result of Paul Gallico's impassioned piece on that exciting but satisfying sport.

Vitality

"I can hardly wait for the next issue to come . . . SPORTS ILLUSTRATED is improving with each issue and I always look forward to the coming week so that I can enjoy your publication."—Bob Feller.

As a fast-closing news weekly, SPORTS ILLUSTRATED has been able to move with the speed and vitality of sports themselves. To readers, this is obviously ideal. And to advertisers it has an even more important meaning: immediacy combined with selectivity combined with modest cost.

"This new magazine is a natural and we plan to advertise in it in a big way."—
Harry Doniger, Pres., MacGregor Sportswear.

Opportunity

As a weekly, SPORTS ILLUSTRATED joined a selective group of publications. Before August 16th, there were just seven general weeklies.

Now there are eight: SPORTS ILLUS-TRATED, LIFE, Saturday Evening Post, TIME, Newsweek, U. S. News and World Report, The New Yorker, Business Week.

When America got its first national weekly of sports, advertisers got a new opportunity for sales. For many of them, SPORTS ILLUSTRATED has already become "the national magazine we've been waiting for."
It is moderate in price. It has a selected audience. It has the vitality only a weekly can have.

Moreover, in an economy of abundance, pleasure is an increasingly important factor in making sales and profits. And not until now has America had a truly national weekly—whose business is pleasure—52 times a year.

525,000 WEEKLY CIRCULATION

William W. Holman, Advertising Director, 9 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 20, New York

PLASTICIZED CLOTH is used by Robert Cronbach to make birdlike forms of his sculpture, Flight. Wet fabric was stretched over aluminum rods. When dry, forms were strung together by wires.

WOOD CURLS, caught in fanciful scramble between panes of glass, are arrangements of Emil Hess who hangs them from the ceiling or uses them as table tops. He also makes designs on glass with tapes.

STEEL ROD, oxyacetylene torch and goggles are standard equipment for artists at New York City's Sculpture Center. In rear, Barbara Lekberg uses torch to weld metal to surface of sculpture.

HANDFUL OF DUST is collected by Enrico Donati at start of painting. Fascinated by lavalike, earth textures, he tries to achieve similar primeval effects (opposite page) by building up surface with variety of materials, including scattering of ashes from his pipe.

NEW MEANS FOR MODERNS

Artists try out rayon, rods and rubbish

There are strange goings-on in the art world today. Studios have been transformed into foundries, carpenter shops and laboratories. Artists, garbed in mechanics' aprons instead of smocks, wielding acetylene torches instead of chisels, are in the throes of experiment, surrounded by automobile paints, rayon fiber, liquid plastics, wood shavings, metal rods, glass, wires. This transformation, which has come about largely since the war, stems from the modern artist's desire to express new ideas, achieve new images and effects. With 20th Century aptitude he has begun to make use of modern industrial products. To dramatize luminosity he has learned to paint on orlon; to create lightweight, aerial sculpture he is molding forms out of plasticized fabric. Such experiments, of which a few are shown here, have resulted in often startling, sometimes impressive works and are helping to enlarge the territory in which an artist can work.

RAYON, DUST AND AUTO PAINT are all used in the latest paintings of ultra-abstractionist Enrico Donati. Into a base of wet and gooey paint and glue he works sand, stones, rayon fiber, coffee, vacuum cleaner dirt, building up an inch-thick surface, here coarse in texture, there smooth. He then works and models it with his palette knife. Donati prefers to use the natural colors of his materials. The results, he says, are "surfaces as hard as rock, which don't crack or break."

INK ON ORLON produces brilliant colors for abstractionist John Ferren, who stretches orlon over a window so that the light comes through and paints over it with bright, nearly translucent inks. The paintings must also be displayed in windows. They give something of the effect of stained glass, although much brighter, the light from behind producing a luminous glow. Ferren has found a second advantage in orlon: it does not shrink and stretch as a linen canvas does.

WOOD IN PLASTIC is used by Japanese-born Sculptor Leo Amino, who here breaks open a mold. Amino pours transparent liquid plastic into the mold, lets it reach a jellylike consistency, and embeds wood and other objects to add texture, color and form to the final work. Then he fills the mold with plastic, bakes it hard and finally files and burnishes it to a high finish. His Hunter (right) has pieces of polished mahogany set inside to accentuate the line of face and figure.

WEARING CITY CLOTHES AND CARRYING BEDROLLS AND SURVIVAL

A SECT ANTICIPATES ATOMIC ARMAGEDDON

UNPACKING SURVIVAL KITS, which weigh 12 pounds, John Burton and Bettie Jarry check contents, including food, medicines, toiletries.

KITS, GIRLS FROM SEVENTH DAY ADVENTIST CHURCH TRAMP PAST A MARYLAND CORNFIELD TOWARD THE WOODS TO BEGIN THEIR THREE-DAY EXPERIMENT

Fleeing to the woods as they might after an atomic attack, some 33 Seventh Day Adventists from Takoma Park, Md. set out to see if they could survive three days with meager gear. Adventists, who hold that the Second Coming of Christ is near at hand, believe it will be preceded by the apocalyptic troubles. They have accordingly been leaders in civil defense work. Using special kits, the hikers ate dehydrated food and made tents from tablecloths (below). The November night proved too cold for two children who were taken home. Everyone else survived but with no illusions that the real thing would be as easy.

IMPROVISING A TENT, Biology Professor Lester Harris drapes a plastic tablecloth over wooden frame. Tent took six cloths, accommodated Harris' wife, children (right).

'IT'S EASIER TO MAKE A MILLION THAN A HUNDRED THOUSAND'

Louis Wolfson, big business raider and builder of $231 million empire, now draws a bead on Ward's

by HERBERT BREAN

OUIS WOLFSON, the brisk 42-year-old Florida financier who is L challenging dour 81-year-old Sewell Avery for control of the $700 million mail-order house of Montgomery Ward, was recently asked if he felt that he had ever made any serious business mistakes during his career. Since in that career Wolfson has risen from helper in a family junkyard to control of a $231 million industrial empire, the question might have appeared a trifle academic. But Wolfson pondered it with his usual polite and obliging air. Yes, said he after a moment, he had made a mistake once. It had been in the mid-1940s, when he and his associates had engaged for a while in producing grade B movies.

"But I'd understood your movies made money," said his questioner.

"Oh, they did," said Wolfson. "Several hundred thousand dollars. But we took a couple years to do it and that's tying up too much time and capital for that size result."

In most businessmen, contempt for a several-hundred-thousanddollar profit would be put down to sheer arrogance. In Wolfson's case it is not. His precise candor in such matters is due partly to the fact that for him making money seems neither a passion nor a labor, only a conditioned reflex.

At the age of 20, Wolfson left the junior class of the University of Georgia with a serious football injury, an unpromising scholastic record, a smoldering ambition to prosper—and meager prospects.

Today he has a personal income of close to $1 million a year (not including capital gains, family trust income and the like) and a personal fortune well into the millions. He and his tight circle of associates own 12 businesses outright and control 20 more (see map, next page). Wolfson himself heads seven of these as board chairman, is president of three more and is a director of three others.

Just as impressive as Wolfson's assets is his technique for getting them. This technique has evoked considerable criticism and continuing suspicion. It has brought Wolfson under the scrutiny of various local and congressional investigations, including that of Racket-Sniffer Estes Kefauver. To Wolfson the harm has been negligible, aside perhaps from the hurt suffered by a man who regards himself as a pioneer of new business methods and instead finds himself under attack as an old-style buccaneer.

The Wolfson technique

THE Wolfson operating code resembles the most advanced and scientific methods of prospecting for gold, possibly because that is pretty much what it is. Wolfson continually scratches around among the balance sheets of U.S. corporations until he finds one with greater assets or larger profit potentials than appear on the surface. Not until his staff has assayed the property thoroughly does he start buying it. After getting his own men into key jobs, Wolfson may pursue one of two lines of action. He may decide simply to juggle management and operations into a more efficient, i.e., more profitable combination, or he may decide to siphon off the company's assets in the form of handsome dividends and increased executive salaries.

The latter procedure has brought Wolfson criticism as an "undertaker" concerned only with seizing wealthy companies and carefully and profitably draining off their assets, ultimately to bury them in the potter's field of insolvency. The most drastic and most censured episode of this sort occurred when Wolfson took over Washington's Capital Transit Company.

Years of big and bustling government had been highly profitable for Capital, which provides most of the District of Columbia's bus and trolley transportation. In 1949 it had some $7 million in surplus cash lying about. Each share of its stock, which was selling for only $18.50, represented more than $120 in assets. Miraculously immune to the ills of other public transport companies, Capital boasted modern equipment, excellent service, low rates and high public favor. Wolfson bid $20 a share and gained control.

In seeking official approval for their venture, Wolfson's men had firmly told the Interstate Commerce Commission and SEC that they were interested in Capital only as investors, not as operators. Once the deal was closed, however, Wolfson associates John Albert Broadus Broadwater and Doran Weinstein were installed as president and executive vice president. The board of directors, which must legally contain a majority of local residents, was filled almost exclusively with out-of-town Wolfson associates and friends. Next these directors began voting startling dividends. The conservative old management had paid out a total of $7.50 per share during the preceding five years. Wolfson-style dividends were $3 in 1950 (first full year under Wolfson control), $4 in 1951 and a whopping $15.60, with a four-for-one stock split, in 1952. In 1953 the figure was $1.60—the equivalent of $6.40 per original share. Executive salaries were more than doubled and the new directors got a fee of $100 for attending meetings, although the old directors had been content with $40. Associate Broadwater was voted a $10,000 annual pension for life, whenever he might feel like retiring.

Meanwhile bus and trolley mileage was curtailed some 20%, fares increased four different times, and Capital's employes were refused a liberalization of their pension plan. The public began to fume and Washington newspapers began to gripe. Their suspicions were further reinforced by a statement The Evening Star picked up from Wolfson: "I'll protect the stockholders [of Capital Transit] within the limits of the law, in spite of anything—including Congress and the Public Utilities Commission."

ANGRY CRITICISM was heaped on Wolfson in Washington for high fares and big profits of his Capital Transit.

The Senate in 1953 voted $35,000 for a look into the transit company. A few months later the District Public Utilities Commission started an investigation of its own. The Senate Committee on the District of Columbia concluded that the Wolfson management was maintaining the transit company's physical properties well (it has won the national transit safety award 10 times in the last 11 years) but that it otherwise was "wholly inconsistent with the philosophy of fair and reasonable return . . . wholly inconsistent with the stated intentions of representatives of the Wolfson group before the ICC."

Last summer the Public Utilities Commission apparently succeeded in convincing Wolfson's men that while ordinary corporate management may treat stockholders as generously as it likes, a public utility is operated primarily for the benefit of the public. It was agreed that dividends would be limited to 20¢ a quarter during the last half of this year and to 30¢ for the first quarter of 1955—a dramatic comedown.

Capital Transit is only one fief in the extensive Wolfson domain, but the Wolfson record there will undoubtedly be cited time and again during the forthcoming struggle for Montgomery Ward. The issues in that battle will be the flamboyant Wolfson methods vs. the conservative—indeed, hidebound—policies of Ward's present management, headed by Sewell Avery. Ward's financial position is today among the most secure of any U.S. corporation because Avery has squirreled away total assets of $717 million, nearly $300 million of it in cash and government bonds. Ward stock, until Wolfson began buying it, was selling at $68, paid a modest 5% and had a book value of $92.37. (It is now selling at $72.25.) But today Montgomery Ward properties are rundown, the working force resentful of the imperious Avery and the board of directors creaky with five of nine members over 75. Some indication of his present business repute was given last spring when Avery went to the hospital for an operation and the price of Ward stock advanced almost $5.

Since the end of World War II, Ward sales have increased 52%, but Sears, Roebuck, expanding with the economy, has increased its sales 186%. Montgomery Ward, with its rich treasury and rich profit-making potential tightly bound by management, is thus an ideal Wolfson target.

Wolfson believes there are dozens of companies held prisoner by ultraconservative managements, like medieval maidens in a dragon's cave. For the economy to function at its best, he insists, they must be freed. Carefully hoarded profits must be distributed, thus encouraging new investment. Employes must be encouraged to more creative work by generous wages and bonuses. Wolfson's philosophy might be briefly defined as "spreading it around for everyone"—"it" in this case meaning a company's pecuniary and

pletely taking over the company in question.

Wolfson never moves in to take over a company until he has conducted an intelligence operation involving months and sometimes years of quiet, painstaking investigation. Old managements suddenly left without anything to manage are usually stunned to discover how much "The Wolfsons," as they are sometimes called, know about their business' most intimate details. Wolfson operates with eight "associates" (see p. 192) who are bound together, not by any legal instrument such as a corporation charter, but simply by their mutual business interests. Two of them are his brothers. The others were mostly small, only moderately successful business or professional men until they encountered Wolfson. (There are also 14 lesser peripheral associates.) When a likely prospect is sighted, one or several associates are assigned to head up the investigation.

The investigators first study the company's overhead costs, profit figures, labor efficiency and the like against the average figures for the industry. If the figures are out of line poor management is indicated, and The Wolfsons begin to get interested. Production rate, product quality, sales methods, manufacturing equipment and physical plant are carefully studied. The Wolfson representatives even look for executives living beyond their means, because they believe that a man worried about his personal finances cannot devote adequate attention to his company.

The strategy board

WOLFSON first began studying Montgomery Ward's possibilities several years ago. Dozens of former Ward officials, a group that, thanks to Avery's temperament, now includes a large crosssection of U.S. business brains, were interviewed. The Wolfson file on an ordinary company comprises a stack of typed reports possibly four feet high; that on Montgomery Ward would fill a fair-sized room. Eight copies of every important paper are made and distributed to the inner circle associates for study and discussion. The stock list is examined to find out who owns the company. Finally Wolfson and associates gather in a hotel room and thresh out the question of whether or not to buy. At these lengthy shirtsleeved sessions, thick with cigar smoke and argument, the associate best acquainted with the situation outlines its possibilities and the others aggressively try to pick holes in his presentation. Wolfson's ideas are often attacked as savagely as those of any subordinate. If the decision is to buy, Wolfson then polls the group on prospective stock purchases. "How much do you want, Broad? . . . How 'bout you, Buddy? . . . How much you putting in, Doran?"

The minimum annual income of an inner circle associate is $50,000, and several of the eight make more than twice that. Even so, one may be short some of the amount he wishes to invest, in which case Wolfson lends it to him. After lesser associates have been told what is going on, The Wolfsons start buying up stock. When they have control they begin jettisoning executives, keeping only those who their surveys have indicated are competent. Often needed equipment is purchased, as was done at Milwaukee's Nesco kitchenwares and utensils plant, where $2 million was spent on new machinery and product redesign.

lion was spent on new machinery and product redesign.

Wolfson currently has a supersecret list of some 75 U.S. companies that he believes can make much bigger profits than they now do. The three existing copies of the list are guarded carefully by Wolfson himself, Elkin ("Buddy") Gerbert, his closest associate and usual traveling companion, and "Miz Clements"—Monteen Clements Tomberlin, Wolfson's personal secretary, who has been with him 18 years and who types, with appropriate security precautions, all the reports on companies under Wolfson scrutiny.

This massive onslaught on the citadels of U.S. capital had its quiet beginnings on Jan. 28, 1912, when Louis Elwood Wolfson was born in St. Louis. When he was 14 months old the family moved to Jacksonville, where he grew up. Because his father was a Russian immigrant who ran a junkyard, there has been a tendency to portray Wolfson as an Alger hero risen from dire poverty. Actually Morris Wolfson ran a fairly large and successful scrap business and was able to keep his five sons and three daughters in reasonable comfort. Schoolmates remember Louis as a generous companion and superb athlete who won letters in track, baseball and football, was captain of the basketball team and was named All-Southern high school end. After his graduation in 1930 he went to the University of Georgia on a football scholarship.

At college his fondest dream was to make All-American. He also occasionally was heard to confide to friends that he "had to make some money." The friends now recall those words with the feelings of those who might first have heard young Tom Edison say he thought he'd fool around with electricity.

Unfortunately for Wolfson's first ambition, Georgia was provided with two of the greatest ends in the business, Wed Kelly and All-American "Catfish" Smith. Perhaps fortunately for the second ambition, Wolfson got into the Yale game of 1931 as a sophomore substitute. He tried to tackle Yale's famed Albie Booth and in the resulting pile-up his left shoulder was jammed back in its socket. His athletic career was at an end. His scholarly interests having been almost entirely confined to books on business, he left school the next year.

In 1932, with $10,000 raised on family insurance policies and borrowed from a friend, he founded the Florida Pipe and Supply Company. "I felt that business was a field that had possibilities," says Wolfson, who has only a rather limited sense of humor.

Florida Pipe and Supply got its real impetus from Wolfson's discovery that when J. C. Penney, the pious chain-store magnate, built a home for retired clergymen 25 miles southwest of Jacksonville some years before, a great deal of pipe had been left over. This was still stored in a warehouse and Wolfson bought it from Penney's son for $275.

Thereafter he and his older brother Sam worked early and late, loading and delivering the pipe to plumbers, industrial plants and contractors, and donning Sunday suits in between to go out and sell more. In all, they disposed of the pipe for about $100,000—a profit of 36,263%. Under Louie's leadership the Wolfson brothers subsequently got into a variety of enterprises, including theaters, park-

In 1946 Wolfson made his first major deal and drew his first major criticism. A $19.5 million shipyard on the St. Johns River at Jacksonville was put up for sale by the government to the highest bidder. Every bidder, the government specified, must be a shipbuilder and must agree to maintain the facility in standby condition. What followed is difficult to trace through the welter of claim and counterclaim that arose at the time and during two subsequent government investigations. In any case, after Wolfson had entered the first round of bidding, even though not qualified under the government's conditions, the entire set of bids was thrown out on a technicality. Wolfson then bought a controlling interest in the Tampa Shipbuilding Company and he made his second bid of $1,926,500. Wolfson's bid proved highest although the government was considerably startled to discover that his figure was just $292 more than its own presumably secret appraisal of the shipyard's worth. Wolfson's admirers adduce this as one more evidence of his uncanny skill at appraisal—a skill that first manifested itself when he amused college friends by biting salt-cellar tops to assay the silver in them. Although Congressman Mitchell Jenkins (R., Penn.) made some scathing remarks about "mental telepathy" during the 1947 investigation, both that inquiry and a grand jury investigation in 1952 gave Wolfson a clean bill of health.

Next, Wolfson dismantled the St. Johns yard (the stipulation about maintaining the yard in standby condition had been dropped) and sold it piecemeal for a $2.2 million profit. He continued operating the Tampa yard until 1947, and then sold it too, for another capital gain profit of $3 million.

This was a turning point in both Wolfson's financial position and his financial education. He had discovered a principle that has since become a Wolfson byword: it is easier to make a million than $100,000. As he expounds this philosophy: "Supposing you're bidding for a contract, or to buy something. If the amount involved is $100,000, there are lots of people interested and competing with you, because a lot of people can handle a $100,000 deal, and most of them will settle for a $5,000 or $10,000 profit. But on a $1 million deal you have only a few competitors because only a few people can handle that. On a $1 million deal I want 20% to 25% profit and I can get it because I can appraise the competition, I know their strength and know where I am. On a really big job like a $26 million construction contract there may be a possible 40% profit because there is no competition at all."

This theory was responsible for Wolfson's disappointment, as noted earlier, in moviemaking, the next field he invaded. During this period he had another very enlightening experience after contributing more than $150,000 to the 1948 campaign of Fuller Warren for governor of Florida. Another major contributor was the operator of four Florida dog tracks once partially backed by Al Capone. When the Kefauver crime-investigating committee reached Florida in 1950, it called upon Wolfson to explain his involvement in the campaign. Wolfson testified that he had been interested in Warren's election simply because he and his family owned a great deal of Florida real estate and had felt that Warren could do a great deal for Florida. Kefauver said afterward that the committee had found nothing illegal or "sinister" about Wolfson's interest in the campaign, but Wolfson is still sensitive about the subject and has since shied away from politics.

In 1949 Wolfson joined a group of dissident stockholders which took over Merritt-Chapman & Scott. A few months later he captured Capital Transit. For Wolfson it was a good year, although one in which many other financiers began eying him narrowly, as they have done ever since.

The education of Louis Wolfson

WHILE his record in Florida is not reassuring and his record in Washington is plainly against him, recently there have been indications that, possibly because he has all the money he needs, Wolfson is becoming less interested in the quick buck than in the more lasting pleasures of a big job well done. He not long ago refused a $60,000 bonus that the Merritt-Chapman directors wanted to give him, asking that it be distributed among the hourly workers instead. (He would have netted only $6,000 after taxes anyway.) He also turned down a $100,000 annual salary offered him by the directors of the Devoe and Raynolds paint company after he acquired it and became its board chairman last June. Except in Washington, labor has had fairly pleasant dealings with The Wolfsons and usually considers their entrance on the scene as a portent of more stable and more widespread employment.

In the 11 other companies that he has acquired since 1951 Wolfson has usually stepped up a formerly conservative dividend rate, but the largesse has never compared with that at Capital Transit, and Wolfson has done much to improve both plant and methods. One executive, a holdover from the previous management of a recently Wolfsonized company, said, "I've never had so much fun, indigestion and sense of accomplishment as I've had in the last year. He's done more for this company in the last 12 months than anyone else has in the last 12 years. He's quiet and soft-spoken and he listens you out. When he gets all the facts—and you've got to have them down cold—he'll ask, "Do you want it? Is it good for us? Okay, you got it!"

Wolfson's talent for inspiring loyalty is one of the main facets of a basically very uncomplicated personality. Twenty-two years and $230 million after it all began, he still goes to the dentist he always went to, still employs the Jacksonville lawyer who has always handled his family's affairs, still gives jobs to old friends and former football players. When he meets a man he wants he says with unblinking candor, "I hope you like me because I like you, and I want you to come and work with me."

Thereafter he may drive his friend hard, occasionally giving orders with all the side-of-the-mouth curtness of a harassed football coach. But even when barked at, his associates regard Wolfson with an idolatrous affection that cannot be explained solely on the crass grounds that he has made a lot of money for them. Said one recently, "I would without questioning do anything in the world that Lou Wolfson asked me to do."

There is justification for such confidence. Wolfson is familiar with and can often recall down to the last dollar every significant figure in his dozens of companies' reports. He can cite Dow Jones averages on a second's notice. He has no constitutional need for sleep and probably does not average six hours a night, a fact that troubles colleagues not only for his welfare but for their own, since Wolfson expects them to keep pace with him.

Unlike some of them, Wolfson has the physique for this stern regimen. He is a broad-shouldered 6 foot 2, with the muscular legs and tanned, level-browed face of the typical ex-athlete, although without the pot belly that usually accompanies typical ex-athleticism in its 40s.

His devotion to business is untempered by any apparent need for relaxation, mental or physical. He has never smoked. He will sip a highball rather than embarrass a hostess, but he has said he cannot understand how anyone can enjoy the taste of liquor. He is no gambler, although he likes a congenial poker game with friends.

He is studiously polite, cocking an attentive ear and mind to what is said to him and replying in a soft drawl that turns "help" into "hep" and "million" into "mi-yun" with a courteous "sir" often added at the end. He is capable of such remarks as "I have enormous respect for any U.S. senator," and "Sir, my political party is really the American party." The overall effect is to give him a somewhat overpowering and unreal aspect.

He took his longest vacation in a decade last summer when he went to the Beverly Wilshire in Beverly Hills to relax for 10 days. Recalling the interlude recently, he claimed he spent most of it lying around the hotel pool sunning himself, but added, "Of course, I was dropping in on the Devoe and Raynolds plant too." He lives with his wife and four children in a handsome $200,000 home facing Biscayne Bay in Miami Beach, although he is away traveling, mostly on trains, about a third of the time.

When he is not on the road, his home is his headquarters. The main offices of the Wolfson enterprises are in Jacksonville, but he goes there only a couple of days a month. He does not take his business home, but keeps it there, in a modestly furnished office on the first floor where he gets 50 to 60 long-distance calls a day.

Wolfson's principal confidant and closest companion, the 45-year-old Gerbert has known him since school and college days. He joined Wolfson businesses in 1947 after selling out his own prosperous shoe store chain, now sits on boards of eight Wolfson firms, makes about $75,000 a year.

J. A. B. BROADWATER

Oldest member of the Wolfson high command, the 58-year-old Broadwater was one of few former executives of Tampa Shipbuilding whom Wolfson kept on after buying yard. Still president of Capital Transit despite the furor over highhanded policies there, he is a director of five other firms.

DORAN S. WEINSTEIN

Another veteran of the Wolfson campaigns, Weinstein, 38, an old family friend, went to work for Wolfson's Florida Pipe and Supply in 1940, is now second in command at Capital Transit and an investor and important adviser in other Wolfson ventures. Weinstein was World War II officer.

ALEXANDER RITTMASTER

Rittmaster is an expert in running the sort of proxy battle that Wolfson now faces at Montgomery Ward. A former investment counselor, he is also one of Wolfson's sharpest private eyes in the exhaustive investigations of the inner secrets of firms that Wolfson contemplates taking over.

Wherever he is, Wolfson is almost always thinking, and usually talking, business. He is a fond and gentle parent but his children occasionally complain that when he is playing with them Daddy's expression has a tendency to grow abstracted, as his mind wanders off onto the balance sheet of New York Shipbuilding or some other enterprise.

He is an ardent sports fan, and follows with especial loyalty the fortunes of the University of Georgia ("my school"), University of Florida ("my home state"), the University of Miami ("my home town") and Notre Dame ("my friend Frank Leahy"). Aside from business papers he reads little. When he does, he dips into the lives of financiers and industrialists. "I'll read a passage over 15 times until I see just what the mistake was that the man made and how it can be avoided," Wolfson said recently. "What kind of mistakes? Well, you take William H. Vanderbilt saying "The public be damned.' [This was some time after Wolfson's "I'll protect the stockholders in spite of anything" remark about Capital Transit.] No man is big enough to say that if he is in business. He's got to respect the public."

Wolfson will need all of his genius for cold business calculation and warm personal influence to convince a majority of Ward's 68,-000 stockholders that Louis Wolfson can do a better job for them than Sewell Avery. For one thing, many Ward stockholders apparently approve of Avery's cautious methods or they would have Again, the Montgomery Ward system of electing directors was expressly set up to confound borers both from within and without. Only three directors a year come up for election. Under Illinois law, cumulative voting is permitted, which means that the holder of one share of stock has three votes but can cast all of them for one director if he so desires. This enables a group to concentrate its voting strength on a single candidate and enormously enhance his chances of election. These two devices combine to hamstring attempts to overthrow the present management. Wolfson and associates have attacked the problem by filing suit in a Chicago circuit court in an effort to invalidate the Ward system of electing directors.

Wolfson's reputation for cutting up surpluses into rich dividends may frighten some stockholders but should attract others not averse to seeing the Ward dividend rate increase while the stock itself goes up. Furthermore Wolfson is planning a two months' tour this winter to some 40 cities in which he plans to rent meeting rooms and explain his plans to Ward stockholders. His boyish sincerity and softspoken directness should make a formidable appeal.

To whatever Wolfson says in the next few months Wall Street will listen both intently and suspiciously. The U.S. financial community still has not made up its mind how to take Wolfson. Some of its more conservative members refuse to discuss him publicly. Wolfson is not merely a newcomer, he is a man of unconventional methods and motives. Wall Street's reserve is intensified by the fact that never before has so large and proper a body of stockholders as Montgomery Ward's been subjected to so open and direct an onslaught.

Wolfson has attempted to define his motives with his usual frankness: "I won't do anything for money for myself any more," he earnestly remarked a few weeks ago. "Once making money was high on my list of ambitions. I thank the Lord that now it is 'way down on the list. When we first talked about Montgomery Ward, even people in my own organization told me, 'It's too big. You're going in over your head.' I like a challenge like that. I've enjoyed proving to them it's not over our head.

"Here's another thing. We have about 20,000 stockholders in our companies now. If I can take in a company like Ward with 68,000 stockholders or so, and 70,000 employes—more than twice as many as we have in our present companies—and put those stockholders' money to work and show them how it is needed to create jobs, and if I can restore the initiative and confidence of the employes in the business that is their livelihood—well, if I can do that I will have gone a long way to awaken corporate management generally to its responsibilities and to reawaken confidence in American corporations. That's my real ambition."

Such evangelistic piety is not likely to make Wall Street grow misty-eyed. Wolfson will have to prove in much more tangible ways that he has become what Wall Street considers a responsible member of the business community. This he will probably try to do. And the more he tries, the more he will serve to keep lazy or inefficient managements alert—and to that extent, at least, he will be contributing to the country's financial vigor.

HOME AND HEADQUARTERS for Wolfson, his $200,000 modern-style house overlooks Miami's Biscayne Bay. His office is on ground floor at right.

THE FRENCH GLORIFY A MILITARY HERO

The movie world is currently entering an impressive Napoleonic era, involving major productions on two continents. In France, the hero's ghost (right) rises before the Arc de Triomphe as the finale to Sacha Guitry's epic Napoleon, a three-hour extravaganza on which the actor-producer managed to spend the almost unheard-of amount—for France—of 500 million francs ($1,450,000). In the film are some 52 stars including Danielle Darrieux, Orson Welles, Michele Morgan and Jean Gabin and, in addition, 32,000 extras.

The making of Guitry's Napoleon has been kibitzed by French historians, one of whom has already accused the producer of 16 errors of fact. The purists also hated Guitry's epic on Versailles last year. But like that film, Napoleon will surely be a succès fou—in Hollywood language, a box-office smasheroo.

A Big Year for Bonaparte

BRANDO PLAYS HIM AS A GREAT LOVER

What M. Guitry's film does for Napoleon's military glory, 20th Century-Fox does for his fame in the boudoir in Désirée. A $3 million CinemaScope production based on a recent bestseller, Désirée has Marlon Brando capably playing the amorous little Corsican and Jean Simmons acting the obscure silk merchant's daughter whom he woos in the rain (right) and to whom, in the film's version of history, he finally surrenders after Waterloo.

As lavish in its own way as its French counterpart, Désirée nevertheless sticks strictly to love and intrigue (p. 200) and avoids all major military engagements. These it leaves to Guitry & Co., who do them up with considerable and complex splendor (see next page).

SCENES OF BATTLE MAKE

ADVANCE AT JENA of French Hussars is shot amid ripening grain on a field near Grasse. During filming Guitry commanded 3,000 local soldiers.

RETURN FROM ELBA shows Napoleon about to land. General is played by two men in film—this is Raymond Pellegrin who plays the older Bonaparte.

AT WATERLOO allied infantry engages French cavalry. In battle scenes 22 actor-soldiers were casualties, received emergency treatment for wounds.

STUDENTS IN SEATTLE PLAY PAJAMA GAMES

For sixty years the brothers of the University of Washington fraternities have given planned pajama parties, establishing a college tradition even more venerable than goldfish swallowing or panty raids. On a recent Saturday night the Kappa Sigma house added a refinement. In a rented dance hall they put five of their own iron beds together with a 7x12 plain wooden frame and four tall posts. Covering the five mattresses with a durable canvas sheet, they then enjoyed what they called a "four-poster fling."

The 66 members of Kappa Sigma and 100 guests came in outfits which ranged raffishly from shorties to nightshirts and were paired so each man's matched his date's. They used the huge four-poster as a lumpy dance floor or an erratic trampolin and, at one point, a bunny-hopping snake line directed its twisting course right up and over the bed. At 1 a.m. the shuddering four-poster could stand no more. It began to fall apart and soon the party was over.

They chose the Best in the World" ... just as you can, too

Back in the golden years before the turn of the century, people of importance met and dined at the fabulous Chapin & Gore Restaurant in Chicago.

If you didn't see just the steak to your liking, the proprietors dispatched a special conveyance, and got it. Naturally, the finest bourbon was served, and Jim Gore had it made in Kentucky for his guests. He invented the now famous term "sour-mash" to describe the slow, careful way of making it. And today in Kentucky, as then, we follow these same steps to produce bourbon that is perfection in the glass.

You may choose the unsurpassed 100 proof bottled in bond called Old Jim Gore. Or the very excellent 6-year-old Chapin & Gore Bourbon which we bottle at 93 proof. Either one is superb. For a treat in the grand manner, ask for Old Jim Gore — or Chapin & Gore — today.

A DEER IN DOUBLE

Along the autobahns in Germany, the places where deer trails cross the highway are indicated by luminous signs showing pictures of deer and announcing: "From here, for the next 800 meters." The signs are intended as warnings to protect deer from motorists, but they also serve deer in another way as a last bit of cover to hide behind before dashing across the road. The one above came out from behind and into the headlights of Max Ehlert, whose camera caught this striking tableau of a deer in the double.
